MAIL PILOT KILLED WHEN PLANE CRASHES IN OHIO; FOG BLAMED

Nature Freak Which
Caused Low Ceiling
Theory Of Flyers

HURON, O., July 22.—William Frederick Martin, 26, of Pontiac, Mich., was killed today when his Cleveland-to-Bay City, Mich., air mail plane crashed on a farm two miles west of here.

A thick, murky fog which was hanging over this region was believed to have been responsible for the accident.

The wrecked plane and its dead pilot were found by George Beatty on whose farm the crash occurred.

Martin's body was seriously mutilated in the crash. It was so tightly wedged in the plane's wreckage that rescuers were forced to use an automobile to loosen the wreckage and extricate the body.

The pilot's neck, both arms and legs were broken, and his chest was crushed.

The crash apparently occurred about 4:30 o'clock this morning. Beatty said he heard a plane flying low over his house at about that time. He said he looked out to catch sight of the craft, but the weather was so murky that the plane was hidden from view.

The plane Martin was flying was a Pitrain Super-Mail, operated by the Thompson Aeronautical Corporation. The registry number was NC-642B.

CLEVELAND, O., July 22.—A freak of nature that caused the flying "ceiling" to drop 2,500 feet in an hour was believed by aviators here today to have been responsible for the death crash this morning near Huron of William Frederick Martin, 26, of Pontiac, Mich., air mail pilot between Cleveland and Bay City.

Martin received his last weather report at 3 a. m., today, officials here stated. At that time the "ceiling" was 2,700 feet. An hour later the "ceiling" fell to 200 feet, but Martin had taken the plane in the time from the Cleveland Municipal Airport without knowing the changed weather conditions.

The National Air Transport mail plane to Chicago which took off a short time before Martin, was forced down at Vickery, O., until weather conditions became better.

RESORT KEEPER IS GUN BATTLE VICTIM

CHICAGO, July 22.—An inquest was ordered today into the slaying of Peter Lusier, resort keeper known as "ash can Pete" who was shot to death in his saloon last night during a spirited gun battle with his assassins.

Presumably the assassins entered when he was alone. Bullet holes dotted the walls and indicated there had been a terrific battle.

Inserio was found on the floor of his establishment with six bullets in his body. He refused to tell who the assassins were and died on the way to a hospital.

MOVIE PRODUCERS TO TRADE PATENTS

PARIS, July 22.—German and American talking picture producers have signed a memorandum embodying terms for worldwide exchange in patent rights, it was announced here today by Will H. Hays, American movie "czar".

The memorandum followed an agreement which was reached here between American and German producers settling a long standing controversy over patents and copyrights.

Hays is returning to the United States tomorrow.

TWO DEAD, TWO SEVERELY HURT

MERCED, Cal., July 22.—Two persons are dead here today, a third is not expected to live and two others are suffering from severe burns as the result of a freak accident. The tragedy occurred when a radio aerial which they were moving came in contact with a high tension wire.

The dead: Mrs. Zelma Gaffery, 40; Jean Gaffery, 13, her niece.

William Gaffery, 19, son of the dead woman, is near death. His two sisters, Aileen, 14, and Jane 12, were seriously burned.

LINGLE SLAYER?

Tommy Abbott and his wife, Irene, shown here, have been arrested in Chicago in the investigation into the slaying of Alfred Lingle, newspaper man. Abbott, sought secretly as the actual killer of Lingle, is also accused of the recent daring attack on Jack Zuta, gang leader, in the busiest section of Chicago's Loop.

ANTI-MERGER SIDE CHEERED BY POINTS SCORED IN BATTLE

Sheet And Tube Head
Ignorant Of Bonus
Paid Grace

YOUNGSTOWN, O., July 22.—Encouraged by a highly triumphant day in court, attorneys opposing the consolidation of Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co. with Bethlehem Steel Corporation today planned to press their fight for details of the merger negotiations.

The trial of the Cyrus S. Eaton-inspired injunction suit against the merger reached a high point yesterday with two revelations which were regarded by anti-mergerists as important in their case.

One was the divulgence by Eugene G. Grace, Bethlehem president, that he received $1,623,753 in bonuses during 1929, and a total of $5,431,684 in the five and a half years from January 1, 1925 to June 30, 1930.

The other was the admission of Frank Purnell, president of Sheet and Tube, that neither he nor the directors of his company knew the amount of bonus Bethlehem paid its executives at the time Sheet and Tube directors voted to merge with Bethlehem.

Grace's compensation was admitted to the court records after a bitter two-day court struggle between opposing attorneys. Bethlehem counsel fought strenuously to keep Grace's bonus out of the testimony, and the anti-merger attorneys fought vigorously and successfully to have it recorded.

Purnell denied knowledge of the Bethlehem bonus figures in answers to questions asked by Judge David G. Jenkins, who called the Sheet and Tube executive as his own witness.

GOVERNOR CONFERS ON NEW EVIDENCE

SAN FRANCISCO, July 22.—With John MacDonald prepared to swear that he testified falsely against Thomas Mooney and Warren K. Billings, who are serving life terms in connection with the 1916 Preparedness Day bomb outrage here, Governor C. C. Young today was to confer with MacDonald's attorneys.

It is expected the conference will result in a reconsideration of the Mooney plea for a pardon.

Although the state supreme court recently recommended against a pardon for Billings, that body yesterday unanimously agreed to hear his new plea for executive clemency and to hear MacDonald's story.

HAS AUTO BUT NO PLACE TO RIDE

Sulton Of Jimma Gets Car First And Will Get Roads Next; May Open Market

WASHINGTON, July 22.—His Right Royal Majesty Abba Jifar, Sultan of Jimma in Southern Ethiopia, Abyssinia, has bought himself an automobile.

It is a vivid red. There is not a road in the sultan's rich province, but it is the light and apple of Abba's eyes. All he has to do now is have the roads built in Jimma, and this he intends to do.

The machine, which cost the sultan about $3,600, was bought only after a mental struggle. It cost Abba $624 to have his machine transported from Addis Ababa to his home in Jimma, but it went most of the way under its own power, the expense was incurred when the sultan had a special raft built to ferry his new possession to its destination.

The sale of the automobile is regarded as of a good deal of importance in America as it opens the Jimma market to a hitherto virtually unknown product. Roads are regarded as inevitable as the sultan must have somewhere to drive his car.

VOTERS IN DETROIT DETERMINE FUTURE OF ATTACKED MAYOR

Recall Election Held
After Bitter War
Over Radio

DETROIT, July 22.—Detroit's voters today are busy spending between $75,000 and $100,000 in a special recall election to decide the sole question of whether or not Mayor Charles Bowles shall be ousted from his $15,000 a year office.

It was the first time in the history of the municipality, the fourth largest in the United States, that a mayor has been faced with what can be termed impeachment.

The battle of the ballots climaxed one of the most bitterly fought mayoralty campaigns in the history of the state. Nightly, the avowed opponents of Mayor Bowles broadcast attacks in radio speeches and nightly the defenders of the city executive replied to them and made new allegations of their own. Sensational charges of fraud were hurled back and forth freely. Both parties also "stumped" the city and the Ku Klux Klan openly held a mass meeting to further the cause of Mayor Bowles.

If Mayor Bowles is recalled, another election with an additional expense of between $75,000 and $100,000, will be necessitated to choose his successor.

There are approximately 450,000 registered voters in Detroit. More than 50,000 signed the recall petitions which are responsible for the mayor's present political difficulties. City election officials estimated that only about 210,000 would be attracted to the voting booths, which close about dusk tonight.

Should Mayor Bowles poll the majority of votes in the election, it would mean a "moral victory" "a vote of confidence," and lastly, that he would be allowed to retain his position as executive of Detroit.

Recent appointments of the mayor are said to be the reason for the predicament of the city head. In a radio speech, Robert Oakman, a former ally, and influential real estate broker, attacked the appointment of John Gillespie, the commissioner of public works. The hand dealers charged that Gillespie had a "lurid record" in politics.

Charges that Mayor Bowles had failed to carry out campaign pledges were also made. The mayor, in answering the attacks, said that he had done his best to fulfill them and that he had endeavored to run the city "for the people of the city."

FOUR DIE OF COLD- SOMEPLACE ELSE

SANTIAGO, Chile, July 22.—While North America sweltered, Chile and the Argentine shivered. Heavy snows forty-four miles from here have caused the death of four persons.

The cold sweep of the past few weeks has continued in the Argentine and especially in the Andes region, where much suffering has been reported from the cold weather.

PARIS, July 22.—Rainy weather, in some cases damaging to crops, has persisted from here to the Azores the past week, the meteorological office announced today.

The rainfall in France for the month of July so far has nearly achieved a record, with further downpours in prospect.

AGED MAN KILLED

DOVER, O., July 22.—Struck by an automobile which was driven by Miss Lulu Shutt, Strasburg, Jonas Allison, 79, is dead here as the result of internal injuries which he sustained in the accident. The girl was exonerated.

BODY RECOVERED

VAN WERT, O., July 22.—The body of Roy L. Bush, 20, of Marion, Ind., who disappeared several days ago from the home of William Ditto, whom he was visiting, was recovered from a quarry pool here late yesterday.

HOW TO BEAT HEAT:

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Here are ten rules for hot weather comfort compiled by Surgeon Cumming of the U. S. Public Health Service:

- "Dress as lightly as possible.
- "Imbibe long, cool drinks.
- "Keep your temper.
- "Keep windows closed.
- "Use discretion in getting out of the heat.
- "Keep the spinal cord protected; wear hats outdoors.
- "Use discretion about work and exercise in the heat.
- "Eat what you please, but don't overeat.
- "Guard against infected food.
- "Be discreet, physically, mentally, emotionally."

DERBY PLANES WAIT FOR CLEAR WEATHER BEFORE NEXT START

Little Rock Pilot Wins
Second Leg Into New York

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., July 22.—The take-off of sixteen remaining entrants in the all American derby was postponed until at least 11 a. m. today following a conference of pilots. Bad weather along the route to Cincinnati caused the delay and it is possible the start may not be made until tomorrow.

Adverse weather reports were received and Lee Schoenhair, referee of the flight put it up to the pilots to decide on the start.

Most of the planes are ships built for speed with ability to stand bad flying conditions sacrificed to obtain higher flying velocity.

With reports of heavy clouds and local thunder showers throughout the Middle Atlantic States, the delay was voted unanimously.

The flight today is to take the planes to Cincinnati, 600 miles away. From there they go to Little Rock, Houston, San Angelo, Texas, Douglas, Ariz., Los Angeles, Ogden, Lincoln, Chicago and back to Detroit, where the 5,520 mile jaunt started yesterday.

Roaring into New York from Buffalo at the rate of 200 miles an hour, Lee Gehlbach, of Little Rock, won the second leg of the derby and he also captured the first lap of the race, from Detroit to Buffalo.

Harvey Mumbert of Hammondsport, N. Y., crashed at Kingsley, Pa., but was uninjured, although he was put out of the race. Edgar Todd of Pueblo, Colo., got off the course and came down at Norwich, Conn. He hoped to join the flyers here today before the hop.

Second best time was made by James Wedell of New Orleans for the derby to date and Herman Hamer of La Salle, Ill., is in third place.

First prize of $15,000, second $7,000 and third $3,000 are the awards.

TRUCK KILLS WOMAN

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, O., July 22.—Injuries which she received when she was struck by a truck that was driven by Albert Blackburn, 30, of Middlebourne, today had caused the death of Miss Mary Troll, 67.

Authorities indicated that Blackburn will be exonerated at an inquest which will be held today. Miss Troll's extreme carelessness was blamed for the accident.

YOUNGSTOWN MUNICIPAL JUDGE ACCUSED OF BOOZE CONSPIRACY

YOUNGSTOWN, O., July 22.—Federal action was anticipated today against a municipal judge, named by Mayor Joseph L. Hoffmann as the man who received quantities of liquor that was stolen from the police station here a year ago.

Mayor Hoffmann has stated that evidence, gathered during an investigation here last July by James M. Doran, former prohibition commissioner, is now on file in Washington. He has indicated that the evidence is sufficient for an indictment.

RELIEF FROM HEAT ENJOYED BY OHIO; EAST IS SUFFERING

Cooler Weather Is Promised
As Rains Move Eastward

COLUMBUS, O., July 22.—Relief from the scorching heat which has enveloped Ohio for the past week and which has caused scores of prostrations, drownings, and combustion fires throughout the state, was promised by U. S. Weather Bureau officials today. A light shower of short duration fell here last night and heavy thunder showers and cooler weather were predicted for tonight.

The maximum temperature here yesterday was 99.

Many Ohio cities are suffering from depleted water supplies.

PITTSBURGH, July 22.—"Rain... cooling breezes..." Pittsburghers trooped to work today over rain-soaked pavements, cheered by the promise of more rain and lots of it, accompanied by breezy zephyrs from the northwest. The weather man made the promise and the torrid spell appeared to be broken.

PHILADELPHIA, July 22.—A water famine confronted Philadelphia today as the terrific heat wave continued unabated leaving a toll of twelve dead in its wake in this district.

The water shortage became so acute when the normal consumption of water reached 550,000,000 gallons instead of the usual 360,000,000 daily that stringent measures were taken to alleviate the situation. Motor squads of police were sent throughout the city to shut off open hydrants and scores of persons including many children

FATHER SLAYS HIS CHILDREN BY DROWNING

Three Submerged In Pool;
Unable To Provide,
He Says

MARTINSBURG, W. Va., July 22.—Sullenly defiant, Taylor Hott, 35-year-old laborer, was held under charges of murder today following discovery of the bodies of his three small children submerged in the waters of a quarry pool here yesterday.

In a confession said to have been made by Hott late yesterday, the father of Gertrude, 6, Calvin, 6, and Boyd, 5, told a tale that county authorities found difficult in squaring with results of the autopsies.

"I killed them because we were unable to provide for them properly," Hott was quoted as having told Assistant Prosecutor Charles N. Campbell of Berkeley County.

"I took the children out for a walk in the afternoon. When we reached the quarry I told them they ought to go in swimming. When they said they didn't want to, I grabbed them, one at a time, tied handkerchiefs around their throats so they couldn't scream, and then threw them into the water."

Although wounds inflicted by a knife and bruises made by a blunt instrument were reported found on the little bodies, Hott steadfastly maintained that he had not struck or stabbed any of the children.

He surrendered to police late yesterday and led them to his parked automobile where the girl, Lillian Ferguson, attractive clinic worker, lay dead.

"I don't know how it happened," he insisted today. "We went to a picture show. That's all I remember."

Authorities found the girl had been strangled to death with a handkerchief, which bore the monogram "E." The machine was parked on a busy thoroughfare for more than twelve hours with the girl's body locked in it and hundreds of passersby failed to discover the tragedy.

The girl's mother, who collapsed when she was informed of the alleged murder, moaned, "I always told Lillian that it was wrong for her to meet Hudson. I felt it. It must have been a mother's intuition."

BLOOD TEST TO REVEAL PARENTS

While parents fret, Chicago doctors are endeavoring to unravel the Bamberger-Watkins baby tangle. William Watkins and his wife declare that they discovered a tag on their baby, marked "Bamberger," but the Bambergers insist that the baby which they brought home from the hospital is theirs. A nurse who scrubbed the tag off the baby taken home by the Bambergers located it and it was marked "Watkins." Blood tests are to be made to settle the disputes. Photo shows, left to right, Mrs. Charles Bamberger and her son, George; Mrs. William Watkins, with her son, Charles, and Dr. Arnold Keegal.

VOTER DROPS DEAD

DETROIT, July 22.—A woman dropped dead in a voting booth here today a short time after she had cast her ballot in the special recall election which seeks to oust Mayor Charles Bowles from office.

The intense heat is believed to have caused the woman's death.

Though momentary relief from the heat was given by thundershowers the mercury began to climb again today.

ACCUSE MAN OF DEATH OF GIRL BY STRANGLING

Leads Police To Body
Of Sweetheart In
Parked Auto

DETROIT, July 22.—Charged with strangling his 21-year-old sweetheart to death, Ellis P. Hudson, 23, hospital orderly, and formerly of Dixon, Tenn. today maintains his innocence as he sits in his cell at the city prison here.

He surrendered to police late yesterday and led them to his parked automobile where the girl, Lillian Ferguson, attractive clinic worker, lay dead.

"I don't know how it happened," he insisted today. "We went to a picture show. That's all I remember."

CLOUDS SHIELD SUN IN COUNTY; YELLOW SPRINGS GETS RAIN

Mercury Drops; Nation
Feels Drought; Ohio
Suffers Badly

While the rest of the country received only light sprinkles, rain, the good, quiet soaking kind, fell in Yellow Springs for three hours Tuesday morning, relieving the parched earth and sweltering humanity.

It rained, really rained, from 8 until 11 o'clock, while clouds giving promise of cooling downpours passed over much of the rest of Greene County's heat baked area. Yellow Springs had another hard shower at noon.

Rains, however, falling over various sections of the state, broke the backbone of the summer's second intense heat wave, which yesterday sent the mercury in the government thermometers at the weather recording station at the State Fish Hatchery on the Springfield Pike to a little more than 103 degrees. The same instruments registered 103 degrees Sunday afternoon.

Between 3 o'clock Monday afternoon when the mercury rose to over 103, and 8 o'clock Tuesday morning, there was an official temperature drop of 34 degrees. The mercury in the government thermometer stood at 69 when Weatherman Ernest Harner made his twenty-four hour period reading at 8 o'clock.

In Xenia light sprinkles fell Tuesday morning. Jamestown, Cedarville, Clifton, Spring Valley and Bellbrook were also passed by when the weather man passed out his quota of rain, with the exception of fine sprinkles which failed to lay the dust.

Water consumption in Xenia Monday reached 1,255,000 gallons, which was below the marks set Saturday and Sunday.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—The country today is in the throes of a drought which, in some sections, has smashed all records of forty years standing.

Despite relief through showers to some parts of the nation, the drought is unbroken, irreparable damage has been done to crops, many cities and towns are suffering from water shortage and heat has taken its toll of lives.

An analysis of weather records by J. B. Kincer, chief of the agricultural division of the U. S. Weather Bureau, for international News Service today revealed the startling extent of the long period of dry weather.

Although the seriousness of the situation has become apparent only recently, Kincer's records disclosed that the drought actually began last December in an area extending from the lower Mississippi valley northeastward to Maryland. Every month has added to the deficiency of rainfall.

The most remarkable figure is that for Memphis, Tenn. The weather bureau there reports that rainfall for the last nine weeks has been but two percent of normal. This is said to be an all-time record.

Only two sections of the country apparently have escaped the blight of the drought. Although there has been dry weather in south Atlantic states, relief came through showers and suffering there is less than in many other places, Kincer said. New England also has escaped the blight, he said.

While the path of the most serious drought has moved from the lower Mississippi Valley through Tennessee, Kentucky, Southwest-

JACKSON, O'BRIEN COMPLETE DAY IN AIR

ST. LOUIS, July 22.—Dale "Red" Jackson and Forrest O'Brien, seeking to win back their world endurance flight honors from the flying Hunter brothers of Sparta, Illinois, completed their first twenty-four hours in the air at 7:11 a. m. today.

A long journey lay in front of the former record holders, however, as they must stay among the clouds until 8:11 a. m. on August 13 in order to set a new world's mark.

The "Greater St. Louis" demonstrated its airworthiness on the first day in the air, easily riding out the thundershowers in this district late yesterday afternoon and evening.

EIGHTEEN DROWN

BRYAN, O., July 22.—Ohio's drowning toll of last week stood at eighteen today following the recovery from the St. Joseph River of the body of Royal Gifford, 31, of Pioneer, near here. It is believed the man was drowned Sunday.

DUBLIN, July 22.—The Free State Government intervened to avert a strike of railway men all over southern Ireland scheduled for today. Renewed conferences were arranged between the disputing factions, with the result that action on the proposed strike was delayed until midnight tonight.

NEW YORK, July 22.—One of the worst tieups in the history of New York's subways today held up thousands of workers in sweltering stations after a car in a seven-coach train was derailed. One woman was injured and panic seized hundreds of passengers until guards quieted them.

The accident occurred near Wall Street and delayed many workers in the financial district.

Realty Head Cites 20 Reasons For Home Owning.

There are twenty good reasons why people everywhere should own their own homes, says Herbert U. Nelson, Executive Secretary of the National Association of Real Estate Boards in their recent story for the public.

Mr. Nelson has drawn up a list of the things that you get when you own a home and don't get when you rent—and he says he can add more items to this list without thinking very hard.

So you may get a mortgage when you buy or build a home, but you also get the following:

1. Financial Independence—More people have started on the road to financial independence through home ownership, than in any other way.
2. Security—In times of stress the home is always something to fall back on.
3. A Cash Equity—A well bought home is as good as a savings account.
4. Credit—Home owner can open check accounts, etc., without difficulty.
5. Peace of Mind—Based on the knowledge that provision has been made for your family.
6. Social Background For Your Children.
7. Play Place For Your Children—Without criticism from landlord.
8. Development of Responsibility—Home owner feels more responsibility with regard to his dwelling and the neighborhood.
9. Interest in Civic and Municipal Affairs—This is good for the home-owner.
10. Chance for Individual Expression—Exterior and interior of the home can be made to express individuality of owner.
11. Permanent Environment—Making neighbors and friends whose friendships last over a period of years.
12. Habits of Thrift.
13. Healthful Exercise—Pride of possession inspires work around home and garden, which is healthful for indoor business people.
14. Character Development—Responsibilities of ownership in meeting emergencies and financial payments, and in making repairs, develop business acumen and character.
15. Independence—(other than financial). The home-owner can order his life as he wishes, with no restrictions or interference from landlord.
16. Savings—Statistics prove that one can occupy and pay a home at approximately the same cost as he can rent an apartment of the same size as the house. When he has completed his payments, he lives in the owned home much more cheaply than in rented quarters. Thus, over a period of years, he is money ahead by buying and occupying a home.
17. Beautiful Furnishings—Higher quality furniture and drapes can be purchased because they fit into a decorative scheme that will last for years, instead of having to be changed periodically as one moves about from place to place.
18. No Restrictions—On Size of Family—Landlord cannot limit the number of children, or the total number of occupants of the home.
19. Pets—The home-owner can have as many pets as he wishes, both indoors and outdoors without asking anyone's permission.
20. Possible Income—The lot might be utilized financially such as by building a garage to hold two or more cars, and by renting a portion of it.

COMMISSION TO ACT ON PLAN SUGGESTED IN LIGHT QUESTION

Assurance that the city will take action regarding the question of opening negotiations with the Dayton Power and Light Co. for purchase of its distribution system, was given business men attending a dinner meeting of the Xenia Retail Merchants' Association Monday evening, by Dr. F. M. Chambliss, commission president, and Mayor Jacob Kany.

About twenty men attending the meeting passed a resolution to the effect that the association file a formal request with city commission to remove from its files a resolution passed by the merchants' body two months ago, favoring purchase of the distribution system, and act upon it.

Mayor Kany said Tuesday morning that the matter will be taken up by commission at its regular bi-monthly meeting Thursday night.

Mayor Kany expressed himself as favorable to municipal ownership of a power and light plant. He said that the Dayton Power and Light Co., whose franchise with the city expires in December, has never submitted to the city a proposal for lower rates, and that the matter of negotiations has rested since representatives of that utility appeared before commission and asked for a renewal of its contract.

Other expressions in favor of municipal ownership, and opposed to such a plan, were given. Opposition to municipal ownership was expressed by several who contended that the city should own its poles and wires, in order that the contract for furnishing light and power might be opened to competitive bidding.

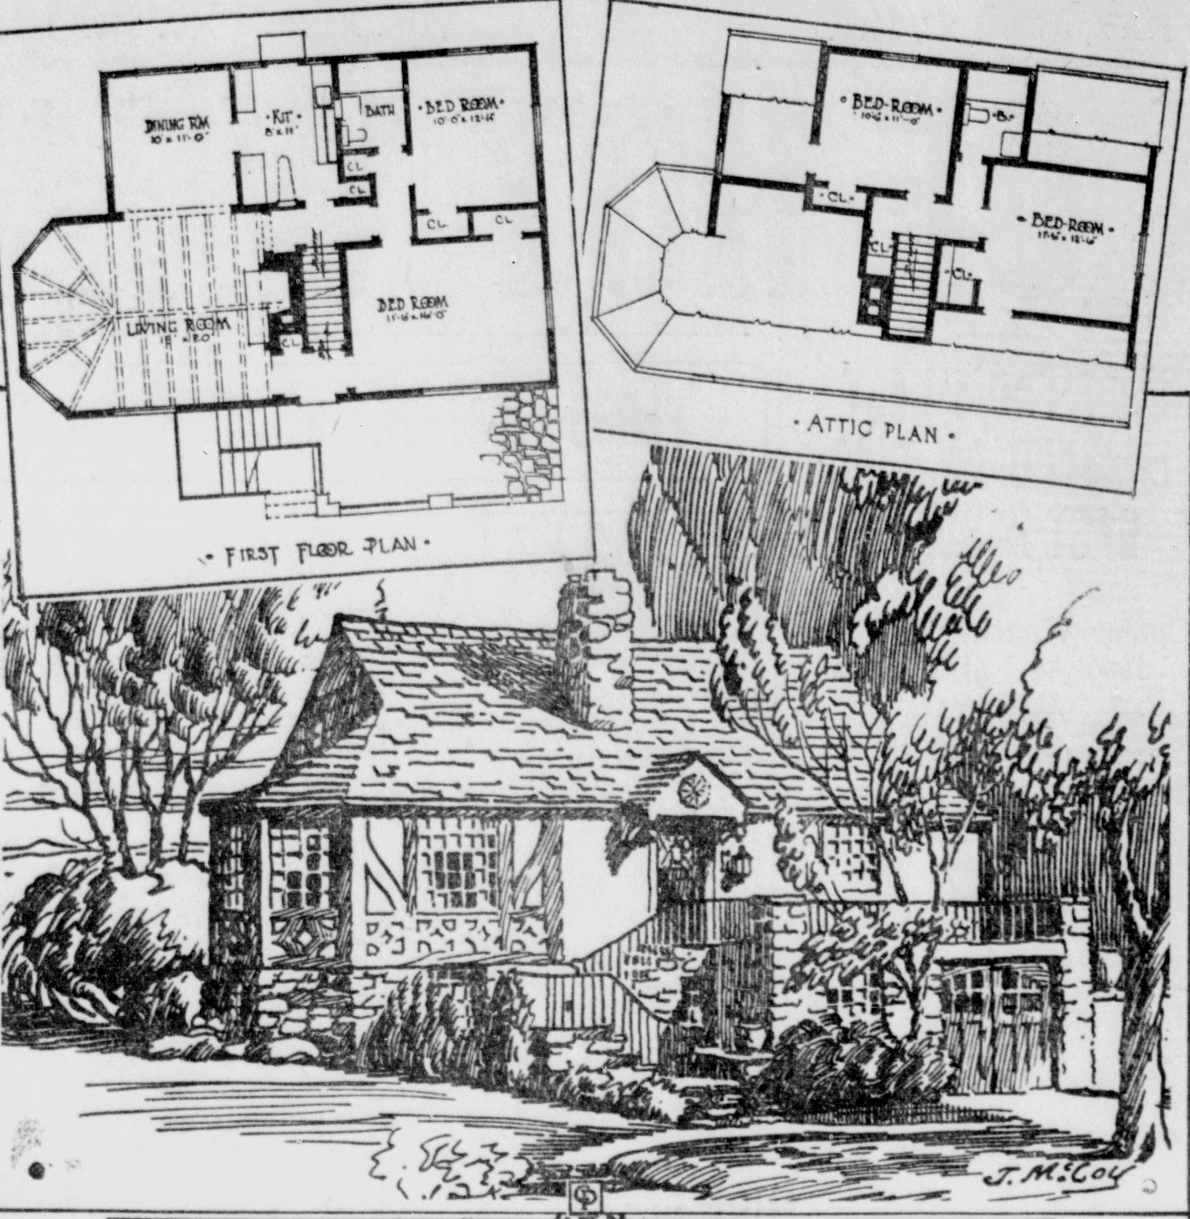

P. H. Flynn and L. D. Wilson, both of whom expressed themselves against municipal ownership, E. H. Heathman, local manager for the Dayton Power and Light Co., and George D. Geyer were others who spoke briefly.

C. W. Adair read a clipping which pointed out advantages of municipal ownership.

AUTOIST FINED

Lon R. Allen, of Alpha, was fined $100 and costs and sentenced to thirty days in jail by Judge S. C. Wright Monday for driving an automobile while intoxicated. Allen, who was arrested by County Road Patrolman L. A. Davis, entered a not guilty plea to the charge and was convicted after a hearing.

THIS HOUSE ORIGINAL AND EFFICIENTLY PLANNED

Small, medium priced house in original design but efficiently planned

Prepared for Central Press
By Architectural Research Bureau
The American Home Magazine

The difficulty of getting original designs in modern houses must be apparent to anyone who drives about our country-side. So many thousands of our small houses look exactly alike. At the same time, where attempts at originality have been made, the results are often more to be deplored than the little square boxes that make no attempt at being different.

A house which is distinctly unusual, yet adheres to the canons of good taste, is the one shown above. It is a really small house, and could probably be built in most parts of the United States for under $10,000. However, the plan is efficiently worked out, and the exterior shows a skilful use of materials.

The high foundation wall, which allows space for a garage underneath the house, as well as for game rooms and fuel rooms, is of stone. Above that, the wall is of stucco, with half-timbering around the living room bay. A roof of heavy variegated slates lend a final touch of beauty.

The living room was designed to have a beamed ceiling, which shows in dotted lines on the plan. The bay formed at the end of this room insures plenty of light and fresh air. The dining-room is really part of this room and increases the feeling of space in this small house. Besides the kitchen, the first floor also has two bedrooms, which are of good size and conveniently located as regards the bathroom.

Two more bedrooms are on the second floor, so that this attractive small house boasts four bedrooms and two baths. The upstairs bathroom is off a small hallway between the two bedrooms.

YOUNG WOMAN ENDS LIFE WITH POISON

Funeral services for Miss Elma E. Liming, 27, who committed suicide Saturday afternoon by drinking a quantity of carbolic acid, were held at the Arthur Funeral Home in Wilmington, Monday afternoon with burial made at Port William.

Miss Liming committed the act at the home of her father, Madison Liming, near Port William at 3 p. m. and died about an hour later. She suffered a nervous breakdown two months ago and relatives attribute this as the cause of the act. Her father and a brother, Ralph Liming, Port William are the only surviving relatives.

HOME CARE OF SICK WILL BE EXTENSION PROJECT THIS YEAR

The extension project to be offered the women of Greene County this fall is "Home Care of the Sick" and Miss Wanda Przyluska, health specialist of Ohio State University is in charge. "We take fire insurance," Miss Przyluska says, "not because we expect fire, but because in case of fire we want some protection. We might wish to learn something about care of the sick, not because we have sickness but because in case of sickness we would know what to do and how to handle the situation."

Answers to questionnaires collected in several counties in Ohio show some interesting reports. In Pickaway County in sixty-four families, 274 school children lost 1,161 days of school in a year because of sickness. Among 530 adults, 990 days of work were lost for the same reason. Doctors bills in those families amounted to $3,770.75 and nurses bills to $271.00.

In Geauga County, 141 families spent $4,337.75 on doctor bills and drugs, not counting the lost time which is worth money. In Medina County, 104 families spent $4,017 on doctors and drugs, and 1,282 days were lost by adults and children because of sickness.

"Do you know how much sickness costs you in this county? How much time is lost because of it?" Miss Przyluska asks.

Tentative dates show that this project will be offered to Greene County women beginning in September. Instructions for giving the patient the maximum comfort with minimum effort and much more will be given in these lessons.

pecially if he had difficulty in stalking a deer or some other animal to satisfy his growing hunger. Eventually he did discover that meat stored in cool, dark caverns was preserved longer than when left out in the sun. He was the discoverer of refrigeration. Thousands of years later, this first principle had advanced only to the point where some of the famous emperors and conquerors had snow and ice brought from the mountains and stored in caves and deep trenches for the preservation of their perishable foods.

In the last few years engineers and scientists have concentrated on the development of practical domestic electric refrigerators. Thousands were sold and gave a certain degree of satisfaction, but required a considerable amount of attention. The public demanded more reliable refrigeration as it realized the necessity of having it in their homes.

Necessity is the mother of invention and the research laboratories of the foremost electrical organizations succeeded in producing a fool proof, hermetically sealed refrigerating unit. This unit does not require oiling or any other attention. How our prehistoric ancestors would have appreciated such a machine. Their marketing with clubs, spears and arrows would have been greatly simplified and made a twice-a-week adventure, instead of a daily task.

Appreciation of values is largely dependent upon comparison. The caveman was content with his struggle for existence, knowing none of the present day luxuries. "We are truly living in a remarkable age and we have become so accustomed to electricity, that we give it no thought when we snap on our reading light, or take perfectly preserved foods from our electric refrigerator. We seldom consider the vast equipment and resources behind the many conveniences made possible by this wonderful service.

Modern wiring gives you a sense of freedom from fires etc., that makes their cost worth while.

CAVEMAN WOULD HAVE LIKED ELECTRIC REFRIGERATION

The caveman, whose very existence depended on his ability to obtain food when he was hungry, would have appreciated electric refrigeration. Naturally, there must have been much food wasted as far as he was concerned. Being unable to store the remainder of a kill after he had eaten his fill, he would have to leave it to the ravages of decomposition or to the wolves.

When hunger next assailed him, he doubtless thought longingly of the choice piece of meat he was forced to abandon having no means by which it could be preserved safely. This thought was probably accentuated as time went on, es-

BEFORE a small assemblage of near relatives and friends, Miss Leontine Jenks, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Jenks, was united in marriage to Mr. Dorsey Nickell, at the home of the bride's parents in Jamestown Tuesday morning at 7:45 o'clock. The single ring service was performed by the Rev. C. L. Buehler, pastor of the Jamestown Methodist Church in the living room of the Jenks home.

The bride chose for her marriage a tailored suit of light blue shantung with white accessories.

DELEGATES SELECTED AT AUXILIARY MEETING

Mrs. Clarence Horen and Mrs. Paul Fuller were selected as delegates from Joseph F. Foody Post Auxiliary and Mrs. Edward Paul and Mrs. Guy Tomz, alternates, to the state convention of the American Legion Auxiliary convention in Cincinnati, August 17 and 18. The delegates were chosen at the regular meeting of the auxiliary in Post Hall at the Court House Monday evening.

Mrs. Elizabeth Anderson, vice-president of the auxiliary, presided at Monday evening's meeting at which time Mrs. Clarence Horen was appointed treasurer of the society. The next meeting of the organization will be in the form of picnic to be held Monday, August 18, in Shawnee Park.

At the close of Monday evening's meeting the hostess committee composed of Mrs. Frank Hustmyer, Mrs. Charles Darlington and Mrs. Elizabeth Anderson served a dainty refreshment course.

ARRANGE BIRTHDAY SUPPER SUNDAY

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Weller, near Xenia, entertained a group of friends at their home Sunday evening. The affair was arranged as a surprise to Mrs. Weller, the occasion being her birthday. Music was enjoyed during the evening after which refreshments were served.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Omer Sturgeon, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Brill, Zimmerman; Mr. and Mrs. Richard Bell and family, Dayton; Miss Helen Williams, Cincinnati; Mr. and Mrs. Walker Hall and family, Zimmerman; Mr. and Mrs. Este Wolford, near New Jasper; Mr. Kenneth Weller, near Jamestown; Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Shack, Xenia, and the host and hostess.

SOCIETY PLANS PICNIC

Members of the Missionary Society of the First Presbyterian Church will hold their annual picnic at the home of Mrs. J. R. McCormick, N. King St., Friday afternoon at 5:15 o'clock. Each woman is asked to bring a covered dish, the committee in charge furnishing chicken sandwiches, coffee and the table service. Following the supper Mrs. Winwood, Springfield, and Miss Mae Orr, will give reports on the Woorster convocation. Mrs. George Weiss, Mrs. Walter South and Mrs. McCormick form the committee in charge of picnic arrangements.

KONJOLA ENDS TWO YEARS OF MAN'S MISERY

Another Reason Why Konjola is A Household Word in Tens of Thousands of American Homes

Konjola, among its thirty-two ingredients the juices of twenty-two medicinal roots and herbs, attacks at the very source the causes of the ills this modern medicine is designed to relieve. Profit by experiences like that of Mr. Joseph Gent, 1645 Oak street, Youngstown, O., who says:

"Two dollars worth of Konjola ended two years of misery with stomach trouble. This may be hard to believe but it is true. Pains after meals were often so severe that I was doubled up in agony. I lost much time from work, and my rest was badly broken at night. Severe pains over the kidneys added to my misery. In a little over two weeks of Konjola treatment, all my health problems were solved. Gladly I endorse this splendid medicine."

Though Konjola does go swiftly to work, it is recommended that, for best results, a complete treatment of from six to eight bottles be used.

Konjola is a new and different medicine of thirty-two ingredients, twenty-two of them the juices of roots and herbs long known for their medicinal value. Konjola works quickly and thoroughly at the very root, the fount of the ills of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, and of rheumatism, neuritis and nervousness. Konjola is not designed to give mere temporary relief, but to bring new, glorious and lasting health.

Konjola is sold in Xenia, Ohio, at the Gallagher Drug Store and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

There were no attendants. Large bouquets of summer flowers were used about the Jenks home.

Immediately following the marriage a three-course wedding breakfast was served the guests. There were covers for twelve at the bride's table which was decorated in a color scheme of pink and white. Those seated with Mr. and Mrs. Nickell were: Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Jenks, Messrs. Max and John Jenks, Mrs. Logan Nickell, Mrs. Chas. Watts, Muncie, Ind., the bridegroom's sister; Mrs. Alma Laird and son Bobby, Kansas City, Mo.; Mrs. Warren Robinson and the Rev. Mr. Buehler.

Later in the morning Mr. and Mrs. Nickell left by motor for a trip to New York and Atlantic City. Upon their return they will reside with Mrs. Nickell's parents for the present.

Mrs. Nickell has been employed at the Antioch Press, Yellow Springs, as a linotype operator. She is also an accomplished musician having studied at the College of Music in Cincinnati. "The Home Of Thrift"

Whipping the jaded horse may temporarily cure the symptom, but will not remove the cause of exhaustion. The last condition may be worse than the first. Artificial spurring of business will not give permanent business relief, and may do great harm. A solid foundation must first be provided.

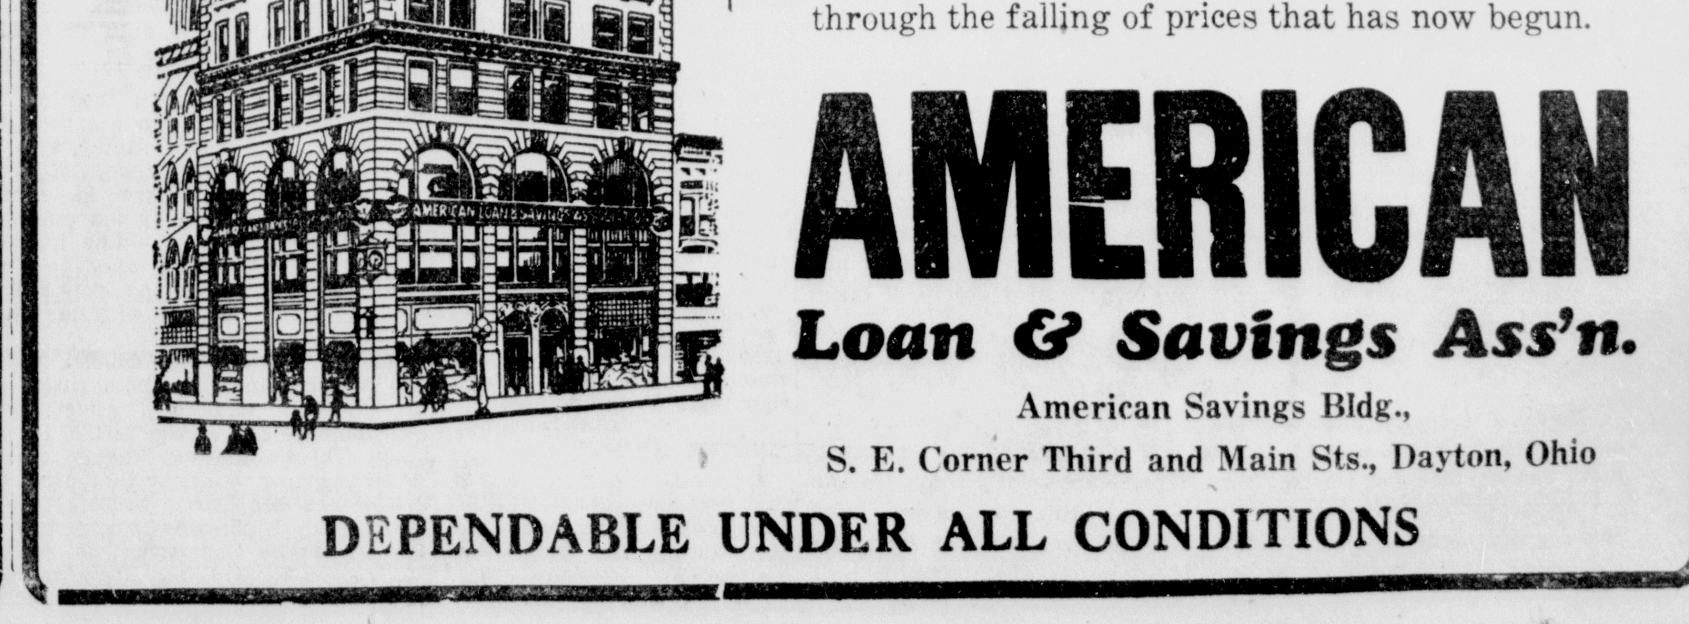

The fortune of the American people is the sum of the private fortunes of the individuals. If, in the flush of the prosperity of the past ten years, individual expenditure has been unintentionally carried beyond the point where it can be sustained indefinitely, there is but one permanent cure—retrenchment.

If you are in financial trouble, reform your budget. Where possible, reduce expenses below income. Put the difference in one of our Savings Accounts, and some of your financial worries will disappear. While you are receiving 6% and Safety, your dollars may actually further greatly increase in buying power, through the falling of prices that has now begun.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

SECRET PRAYER—When thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret; and thy Father, which seeth in secret, shall reward thee openly.—Matthew 6:6.

WHAT PEOPLE TALK ABOUT

One of the older men remarks that when he was a boy, he used to spend a good deal of time listening to the conversation of workmen as they sat around at the noon hour while eating their lunches. Over the cold dinner pail of those days much conversation flowed. He was impressed by the amount of interest those men took in politics and government. They talked often of what congress or the legislature was doing. Such conversation indicated a rather high level of intelligence.

Today, in so far as he overhears conversation, he doubts if the men are talking as much about politics and government. He argues that this indicates a fall in popular intelligence. He has the idea that they talk more about sports and pleasures, their girl friends, the things they like to eat, etc.

One consideration however, is overlooked by this gentleman, and that is as to what the women talk about. The granting of the suffrage to that sex, the work of women's clubs and societies, have broadened their interests. It could be expected that the average group of women 20 years ago would be talking perhaps more about the fashions than anything else.

As one overhears the conversation of women today, questions of government and politics, and particularly questions relating to public affairs in their home towns, are very much talked about. If the men are more concerned about trivialities, the women are less so.

Public intelligence must be rising, for you can see it in the newspapers, which reflect the demand of the people to know more about things of real importance. Even sensational newspapers print a great deal of stuff other than the scandals and tragedies and crimes they are accused of dwelling upon. Every year there is more interest in questions as to how we can make better communities and a better world.

IN BLOCK HOUSES

How would you like to live in a block house? No, not the sort of icebergs used to put up in order to save their scalps from unfriendly aborigines, but a block house of the sort Tommy makes on the floor, only ever so much larger.

Maybe if you are lucky, you will some day. Anyhow Ernest P. Goodrich, of New York, a consulting engineer, and president of the Research Institute for Economical Housing thinks so. He visualizes a building with walls made of thin, insulated metal, steel frames with rock slabs, and factory built structural units, such as bathrooms, stairways, kitchens and porches.

"Imagine a house that can be erected in three days' time from whole rooms taken out of stock, just as a child builds a house of blocks," he says.

Yes, imagine it. Imagine, too, a house that can be put up and taken down in a few hours and moved away to another location overnight, and as Mr. Goodrich suggests can be "repossessed" as pianos, radios and other things may be, when payments are not forthcoming, and then can be "reconditioned" and resold.

Ho, hum! Sounds like a fairy tale, doesn't it, especially to the person who is trying to build a home after the present day style and is wrestling with the labor market and with contractors. Yes, it sounds too good to be real.

The Los Angeles Times says that people are not worse than they used to be, but are simply a little bolder about it. We doubt whether they are even bolder.

Bad tidings for New Jersey fishermen is contained in the news that trout and bass in the state fish hatcheries are being fed on porterhouse steak and buttermilk. Mere anglerworms will be too picky for these fastidious feeders.

Sometimes we wish some doctor would rise up and say that lettuce and spinach and such like things are unhealthful. They might taste ever so much better if he did.

The WAY of the WORLD

By GROVE PATTERSON

TIME TO GO BACK?

It is surely the age of organization. The civilized world is full of clubs, societies, and associations for doing everything that can possibly be done or undoing everything that somebody thinks ought not to have been done. One could easily spend his whole income, even if it were large, on the dues and demands of organizations. Perhaps it is time we unscrambled civilization a little and went back to simpler days and more individualism. Organizations with the most high-sounding titles are not always the most important. Frequently they are not important at all. A feeling of greater personal responsibility and less dependence on organizations would build a finer kind of civilization.

VICTORIES

We do not hear enough of the battles of peace, the victories that do not deal with war. Yet these non-military victories save more lives than were ever freed by the sword. Thirty years ago the death rate from typhoid fever was 34 per 100,000. Today it is less than five per 100,000 of the population. Thirty years ago the death rate from tuberculosis was 200 per 100,000. Today it is less than 78, and the day will come when there will be practically no tuberculosis. Do you not remember when a man or woman with consumption was doomed? Today there is no doom.

Medical science has won these magnificent victories. The least we can do is to co-operate in the cause of health. Join the doctors in putting the emphasis not on cure but on prevention.

WRITING

A man comes into this office and says he feels within him the urge to write. He has ideas. He seeks a medium. It is a proper ambition. There are plenty of mediums. Scores of magazines looking for articles. Scores of magazine editors looking for new names, new material, fresh viewpoint. It is silly to say you have to be well known to "break into the magazines." Nobody is so eager to make a fresh discovery of talent as an editor.

FACT FINDERS NEEDED

So-called economic experts used to tell us we couldn't make too many motor cars, but we did. Experts tell us we never can do this or never can do that, but we do. Tariff experts apparently think we can get along without European markets, but we can't. One more thing this country needs is some fact-finders to take the place of experts.

THE QUESTION BOX

CENTRAL PRESS WASHINGTON BUREAU

Answers to questions of information and fact can be obtained by writing to Central Press Bureau, P. O. Box 126, Washington D. C., and enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope. No answers will be given to marital, medical or legal questions.

What must an American-born woman who married an alien prior to Sept. 22, 1922, do to regain her citizenship?

She must petition in the United States district court for naturalization as an alien, but the granting of the citizenship is a formality that will be concluded 90 days after filing the petition, provided her husband is a citizen or eligible to citizenship.

Killing Ants

What can be used to rid a lawn of ants?

The department of agriculture recommends the use of carbon bisulphide, which can be obtained in any drug store. From one to three ounces of the fluid should be squirted into each ant nest, after which the ground should be stomped over the entrance to the nest. The fumes, which are harmful to man, will penetrate the nest and kill the ants. Wet blankets or burlap placed over the infested area will help keep the fumes in. Care must be used in handling carbon bisulphide, which is inflammable.

Anti-Cigarette Laws

What states have laws prohibiting the sale of cigarettes? None. Utah and Kansas, which formerly enforced anti-cigarette laws, have recently repealed their prohibitory statutes.

On With the Dance

From what work is the expression "On with the dance! Let joy be unconfined!" taken? Byron's "Childe Harold's Pilgrimage"—canto iii, stanza 22.

Indian Tribes

How many Indian tribes are there in the United States? Including tribes of which only two or three members survive, there are 250 or more. The bureau of Indian affairs is at present engaged in compiling an accurate list of the tribes.

Railroad Investments

Is the Pennsylvania railroad rated as having more capital than the New York Central? No. The New York Central has the higher capitalization by several millions of dollars.

100 Per Cent Americanism

What is the definition of a "100 per cent American"? The term is loosely used, but usually refers to an individual who is so intensely patriotic that he is incapable of admitting that either the nation or its leaders ever err, particularly in matters involving foreign relations.

(NOTE: The following pamphlets may be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin and a large stamped, self-addressed envelope for each to Central Press Bureau, P. O. Box 126, Washington, D. C.: "Who's Who in Hollywood," "Swimming," "Seeing Washington" and Charles P. Stewart's treatise on "Our Government.")

Bo-Broadway

By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE

NEW YORK.—Let's all arise and give three cheers for Supreme Court Justice Mack.

On one of those scorching days last week, when the heat would make your bloomin' eyebrows crawl, he turned to the jury and said:

"Gentlemen, you may take off your coats, roll up your sleeves and smoke, if you so desire. This case will probably last some weeks and it's no doubt inconvenient for you to be here in July when ordinarily you might be on holiday. I want to make things as comfortable as possible for you."

Justice Mack didn't jeopardize a scintilla of the court's dignity by that gesture. If anything, he added to it. The integrity of any institution is always safe in the hands of a man who is sure of his own worth. The trouble with too many occupants of the bench is, they demand respect instead of commanding it.

OPTIMISTS

"Tea rooms," according to a newspaper headline, "seldom pay their optimistic owners."

I've never yet encountered an "optimistic tea room owner." Usually they're a gloomy tribe—dignified and morose and unbending. The artistic austerity of their shops is terribly depressing. The lone candle in the easement sheds a melancholy beam and the single tea rose in the brass vase beside the cash register may minimize the commercial discord of the Scotch Piano; but it certainly doesn't infuse the place with cheer.

I was talking it over with Long-acre Lil the other night and she set me straight.

"Them tea room dames is optimists, all right," she said. "They been taught that it ain't cultured to smile an' appear happy. You'd be surprised at th' number of boobies who keep sittin' on their emotions in order to keep on th' right side o' Emily Post!"

THE ROGUE SONG

UNCLE SAM HAS HIS EAGLE EYE ON TURKO-PERSIAN WAR MENACE THOUGH HE ISN'T WORRIED YET

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—The plateau of Ararat is not exactly within Uncle Sam's sphere of influence.

A war, starting there between Turkey and Persia, would seem to be in about the last place on earth, and between the last two countries, to be of any serious concern to Uncle Samuel. And, in fact, it could not concern him directly.

Still, if Turkey appeared to be on the point of gobbling Persia, the prospect might be regarded in Moscow and London as concerning Russia and the British most decidedly. Anything that deeply concerns Russia and Britain, especially in such a way as to create a conflict in interests between them, more or less concerns the whole world, at least indirectly.

THE RETURN FRICTION between President Mustafa Kemal's Turkish government at Ankara and Shah Mirza Reza's Persian government at Teheran has not been very prominently displayed in the newspapers, being generally considered so small an affair, for one thing, and in so remote a spot on earth, for another.

It looks important to the Turks, however. Probably it also looks important to the Persians, although their capital is so far removed from centers of modern civilization that they have not been much heard from.

Anyway, ultimatums have been flying back and forth.

THE TURKS are the aggrieved people, from all accounts. The Ararat uplands, it appears, are the dwelling place of thousands of Kurdish tribesmen, whom President Kemal accuses of making periodic descents on the plains on this side of the slope, looting Turkish villages and murdering Turkish villagers, and then retreating across the mountains into Persian territory, where Kemal says the Persian authorities not only protect them, but arm them for fresh raids, because they make an excellent thing out of disposing of their plunder.

Indeed, Kemal refers to the forays as "Persian invasions" and warns the shah that he is going to invade Persia in turn, unless the latter puts a stop to them.

IT SO HAPPENS that Kemal is reckoned to be just the kind of a Turk to make good whatever he threatens.

How the shah has answered is not very clear, for the correspondence in this Arabian Nights corner of the world apparently has been carried on in a rather informal fashion, but the Persian ruler is not a particularly mild man himself.

He followed the Rothstein shooting, has affixed his name to the title page of a new book dealing with his forty years' knowledge of "Tammie Town's underworld." According to the blurb of the publishers—"Doubleday Doran"—the inside of the Dot King case and the Elwell case, as far as the police know the inside, is told with an air of "finality."

I happened to dabble, professionally, in both those cases, and Brother Carey's "inside" stuff handed me a big laff.

There's an old saying in the newspaper business that "the best stories are never written."

And I imagine that's true of the Police Department as well.

self, according to stories circulated concerning him at the time he seized the reins of power from the Kajar dynasty four or five years ago.

Reza Kahn, as he was known then, had been a Cossack officer, with a tremendous reputation as a fighter—a wholly different type from the weak-kneed line of rulers who had preceded him.

OF COURSE it is true that Kemal is a much more up-to-date individual than Reza, with a good many ideas of modern warfare and some equipment for realizing them.

For instance, the Turkish troops in the Ararat region are described as being provided with several airplanes, out, on the other hand, the Kurds or Persians, or whomsoever the forces may be who are opposing Kemal's punitive expedition, are mentioned as having shot a few of the Turks' planes out of the sky, so that the score is not altogether one-sided.

In short, the bulk of the fighting (if much of it develops) probably will be as primitive, military men say, as anything the world has seen since the invention of gunpowder—sandlot stuff in its proportions, but as picturesque as Harun-al-Rashid.

THIS, HOWEVER, is assuming that President Kemal and Shah Mirza Reza are left to settle their differences between themselves, uninterfered with.

It may not turn out that way. In the long run, it generally is taken for granted that the Turks, given free hand, must beat the Persians completely and presumably assimilate Persia, as a good deal their own kind of a country, though its Mohammedanism is of a thoroughly different brand from Turkey's.

BUT WOULD MOSCOW permit such an outcome?

Russia adjoins Turkey as a neighbor of Persia's. In the event of an emphatic shake-up, students of the middle east surmise that the soviet government would decide the time had come for it to include the territory southward from the Trans-Caucasian region to the Persian gulf under its own communistic banner.

A Russian move in that direction would be stepping on Britain's toes with a vengeance. John Bull's trading rights, some of his mandates, his Persian oil, his road to India—all would be endangered.

To say that the state department is worried by the Turko-Persian war menace would be expressing it entirely too strongly. Nevertheless, the division of near eastern affairs is keeping an eye on the situation. In this day and generation one hardly can pick out a spot on the globe that is not worth watching when trouble begins to sizzle. Besides, the threat of strife at the foot of the mountain on which Noah's Ark landed is humanly interesting.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

By MRS. MARY MORTON

Hot Hamburger Roast, Brown Gravy, Potatoes au Gratin, Buttered Carrots en Casserole, Asparagus Salad, Cold Rice Custard with Cream

Milk puddings are ideal summer desserts, good for "young and old." You might save one of the carrots raw from the casserole to grate over the asparagus salad, to give it color.

Today's Recipes

Hamburger Roast—Two pounds hamburger, one egg, one-half onion, one green pepper, one-fourth cup evaporated milk, one-fourth cup water, one cup bread crumbs, two tablespoons chopped parsley, two teaspoons salt, a little pepper. Chop the meat fine, mix it thoroughly with the unbeat egg, bread crumbs, seasoning and diluted milk. Form into a flat loaf or press into a bread pan. Lay strips of bacon over the top. Place in a hot oven (450 degrees). Sear well and reduce the temperature to 375 degrees, or a moderate oven, and bake 45 minutes to 50 minutes. If pressed into a bread pan, one-half cup of tomatoes may be poured over the meat, or if desired, tomatoes may be used for basting the roast. Serve with potatoes au gratin.

Next: "Pigmy and Giant."

Salt Water Best Mouth Wash

By LULU HUNT PETERS, M. D.

"My gums bleed a great deal when I wash my teeth, and two teeth are loose. Are these signs of pyorrhea? What can I do for it? My dentist said to do nothing but wash my teeth four or five times a day and use a mouth wash which he recommended. I have used it, but my condition is just the same.

"MRS. A."

You may have scurvy or pyorrhea or both, Mrs. A. The gums and the teeth are affected by the diet, and perhaps you are on a deficient diet. Better send for our article on Balanced Diet. (See column rules).

Scurvy is a disease, one of the characteristics of which is a hemorrhage of the mucous membranes of the skin, and it is due to a diet deficient in vitamin C, which is high in fresh vegetables and fruits, especially tomatoes and the citrus fruits.

Of course, in pyorrhea there is an infection as well, causing pus. But with the right diet and the proper daily clearing of the teeth, and a dental cleaning every six months or so (some need it oftener), you should not develop pyorrhea.

The best mouth wash is very inexpensive. It consists of one level teaspoonful of salt to the full glassful of water. Wash the teeth first with any preparation that is best liked (it doesn't make any difference; bland soap is probably as good as anything); then with the salt solution, rinse the mouth thoroughly, gargle three times, then hold a small mouthful for five minutes; expel this and gargle again three times.

The proportion of salt is important because, according to Dr. Louise Bell's theory, the germs die in this, where they wouldn't if the normal salt solution were used, which is a level teaspoonful to a pint of water, not eight ounces.

You should massage your gums,

also, with your finger tips, every day. And go to a dentist who specializes in treating pyorrhea.

Mrs. G.—We know that there are but few diseases that are inherited in the true meaning of the word. Some disease may be congenital; that is, children may be born with them, but these are contracted from diseased germ plasm, or in other ways before birth. For instance, a child in rare instances may be born with measles or scarlet fever. And if the parents are sufferers from syphilis they are pretty sure to be born with that disease.

We do know this, though, about the inheritance of disease: the tendency to certain disease seems to be inherited. For instance, the long, narrow thin chest is an inherited characteristic, and these chests are predisposed to lung disorders. Unstable nervous systems may be inherited, so that certain neurotic tendencies seem to run in families; particular types of intestinal tracts that are more susceptible to indigestion, etc., may be inherited also. But of these tendencies can be overcome by correct living.

Miss F.—Your question on Granular Eyelids is taken up in our article on Common Eye Troubles. See column rules for obtaining this.

Have Mate Examined by Doctor

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

Mrs. T. B.: Why don't you have your husband examined by a doctor to see what causes his mad rages? You could apply to the court for protection from physical violence from him and ask to have him examined.

One part of your letter, however, makes me feel that it is just possible that he may have some cause for jealousy, that part in which you speak of getting rid of him and marrying some other man, intimating that there are plenty of other men who would be available to fill his place in case you had him adjudged insane and sent to an asylum. There is no charge if a patient is sent to a state institution. Private sanitariums, of course, charge for the care of a patient. In most states insanity is ground for divorce.

TRUE BLUE: Thank you for your very kind words of "reclamation." Use Blue. They were very encouraging to me.

Girls in Louisiana can marry without their father's consent as young as 12 years, I understand, but I'm sure that is much too early for any girl to leave home and "face the world," as you say. I am afraid I could not answer your question, and suggest that you consult a lawyer. In Alabama a girl must be 18 to marry with or without her parents' consent, and in Georgia the same.

YOUNGER SISTER OF ASTORIA: You are in a very trying situation, dear. It was mean of sister to take your boy friend away, but if a boy is so easily led, he really is not worth bothering about, is he? It is hard to feel right toward your sister under the circumstances, I am afraid, but make the effort, won't you, dear?

Exercising Important In Summer

By GLADYS GLAD

It is inadvisable for anyone to embark upon a course of reducing or of gaining weight during the summer months without giving the subject considerable thought. Most fleshy persons lose a great deal of weight during the hot weather without any effort on their part. The reason is that they have not the desire for the huge meals that they consume in the cooler months. But it is likely that our thinner friends may find themselves also losing weight. Measures must be taken, of course, to prevent this from occurring.

The woman troubled with too much avoirdupois should not begin a rigorous course of reduction in the summer, if fasting tends to cause weak spells. The heat, with the normal reduction in the consumption of food, makes the season trying enough without deliberately adding to its discomforts. The fleshy woman should get a list of the caloric values of foods and eliminate the heating dishes during this season. But she should consume enough calories to retain her strength.

The thin woman should be increasing her calories at this time, if she wishes to retain her normal weight. However, she should not take cod liver oil, or make her intake of calories too high. The reason is that a high surplus is likely to cause stomach disorders, and the very thin woman usually hasn't a strong stomach. Skin eruptions, such as quickly follow stomach or intestinal disorders, that there remains but one thing for the slim woman to do if she intends to keep what flesh she has. That is to drink milk.

If the thin woman will drink a quart and a half of milk every day of the summer, she will not only retain her poundage, but will probably gain considerably. She must not, however, neglect her regular meals.

To keep the appetite normal during the hot weather is the thin woman's problem, and she should make a mighty effort to get enough exercise to stimulate her appetite. Such exercise should be taken only during the cooler part of the day.

ANSWERS TO QUIRIES

Standard Weight

Eloise: Your standard weight is 127 pounds. Use a bland soap on your skin. I would suggest that you lubricate your skin with pure olive oil nightly.

Gaining Weight

Hopeful and Trudy: Indeed you will find the course of gaining weight included in my booklet on "The New Figure" very effective in adding curves to your figure and in enhancing your health.

Height

Blue Eyes and Puzzled: The growth of the body is regulated by the Thyroid gland. There is no superficial means of decreasing a person's stature.

EDITOR'S NOTE: While it is impossible for Miss Glad to answer beauty questions by mail, she will be happy to send you her pamphlets on "The New Figure" and "Beauty Culture." To receive a self-addressed, stamped envelope and 10 cents in coin, for each to cover cost of printing and mailing. Personal questions on beauty will be answered through Miss Glad's daily column.

PINCH HITTING for Phil Frame BY R. A. H.

With the White House barbecue miniature golf course in operation more than a week, Phil Frame, caddy of the Xenia Country Club, and winner of the championship in the caddy tournament there last summer, still holds the course record.

Tubey shot a 36 at the Henrie Bros. course shortly after it was opened up and his low score still stands.

Henry Eavey turned in the next lowest score, a 39 while Clement Henrie, one of the owners of the course and Walter "Speed" Leonard are tied fifth the next lowest score of 42. Bob Morton, former Xenia Central High athlete and Ohio Wesleyan football star, shot the course in a 44, which is par for the small links.

L. S. Barnes, Green St. business man, has the best score of older players, shooting the course in a 46, two strokes over par.

Mart Berry sits on a bench at the softball game at Cox Field but old-timers among the fans can imagine that instead of seeing the players cavort in this new game, he is thinking about the old Xenia Nationals, the team that first made baseball history in Xenia and set a number of local idols on the pedestals of boydom.

Mart was the first manager for the Nationals. The team, a group of raw youngsters un-schooled in the finer points of the game, organized first under the sponsorship of the late John Witham, and had played for several Sundays when Mart Berry was called to take the reins.

He organized the team on a business basis, equipped the players with their first uniforms and the Nationals were started on their way to a local reputation. The team played first in what was known as Galloway's woods on the Cincinnati Pike and its earliest personnel included William "Dad" Kearney and Mike O'Connor, alternating as pitchers and outfielders; Mike Rachford, catcher; the late Tom "Peanut" Hayes on first base; Lester Stiles at second, Mike McNeels, at shortstop and Harry Schweibold at third. Johnny Hayes, Dennis Langin, Archie Franks and others were also with the team and "Butch" Bentley became pitcher of the club later.

"Dad" Kearney quickly became a local idol. Small boys followed him proudly and when he was in the box the game was considered as good as in the bag. As an outfielder he was never known to miss a fly ball. Fans still recall the bluff Mike Rachford used to make to keep players on the bases from stealing. He had it down so well that few attempted and the bluff helped him cover up a none-too-good throwing arm.

When the team played in Galloway's woods, the fans make themselves comfortable by sitting on the grass under the shade of the trees. One tree in centerfield was the base of the centerfielder's existence. Johnny Hayes used to stand under the tree trying to guess which way the ball would bounce from limb to limb.

The management used to "pass the hat" instead of charging at the gate, which was then against the law, and it was considered nothing to collect $60 or $70 at each game. After the team moved to what was later known as Reserve Park, a grandstand was built, bleachers installed and an admission charge was made at the gate.

Hundreds of fans, many of them women, used to attend the game, especially when the Nationals played the Wayneville team. There was bitter rivalry between the clubs and home games always drew a record attendance. Mart recalls once when the team played in Wayneville, a player who hit a long hit ran directly from first base to third through the pitcher's box and the umpire called him safe. Mart did a little calling himself that day. He called the team off the field.

Greene's Nebraska Indians used to furnish a feature game with the Nationals every year, usually on a week day and Mart recalls the best catch he ever saw was made by a one-handed stab of a shot from an Indian bat in one of those games. It was made by Archie Franks, who was playing shortstop that day although he was also rated as a good pitcher.

Mart took his team to Millersburg once, to play against a team there, and the Nationals were defeated. "Dad" Kearney and Mike O'Connor, both used in the box, pitched their heads off but the Millersburg team included several professionals and they were too hot for the Xenia team. On the following Sunday the team played Akron and Mart recruited for the game by signing up the best of the Millersburg players and bringing back the old battery that had made fame at the O. S. and S. O. Home here, Thornton and Long. Both had played with the Nationals before and Thornton turned in a great game that day, Akron winning 2 to 1. A shot along the foul line that the umpire called fair defeated the Nationals but Mart says to this day that it was foul.

When the Nationals finally broke up they were succeeded by the Reserves. That team later reorganized and moved from Cincinnati Ave., to Washington Park. This year the team changed its name to the Merchants. Its a long cry now back to the diamond in Galloway's woods but many of the older fans still think they saw the best baseball in their experience played there by the old Nationals when they were young Nationals.

SHOEMAKERS TAKE AMERICAN LOOP LEAD BY BEATING KI-RO

The Krippendorf-Dittman Co. softball team forged into the lead again in the American League race by defeating the Ki-Ro team at Cox Field Monday evening 14 to 7.

The teams were tied for league leadership when they went into Monday night's contest and inability to hit the offerings of Perrine, shoemaker pitcher, spelled difficulty for the luncheon clubs.

The losers started well by scoring one in the first while the shoemakers did not launch a concerted attack until the fourth. By this time they had solved the delivery of Russ Kimber and from then on hit him hard and often to accumulate five runs in the fourth, four in the fifth and five more in the seventh, all the scoring being done in clusters.

The losers staged a belated rally in the seventh that netted three runs, and scored again in the eighth, but were unable to overcome the fast-going Krippendorf team. R. Anderson and Luttrell, each with three hits, led the attack for the winners although Wakley did the heavy hitting with a homer and a triple.

The Downtown Country Club meets the Carroll-Binders in a National League game at the yard Tuesday evening unless threatening rain should interfere while the Grahams will meet the Critterons Wednesday evening. The lineups:

JAMESTOWN WINNER
OVER BOWERSVILLE

The Jamestown Independents defeated the Bowersville Independents in a fast game between these bitter rivals played at Leach Park, Jamestown, Sunday afternoon.

Bowersville started well when M. Conklin, first man up, doubled and scored on A. Chitty's single. Evans tightened up after this and permitted only one run during the rest of the game, a singleton in the fourth contributed to an error and a hit.

Jamestown scored three times in the second, and got singletons in the third and fourth, adding two more in the seventh for good measure. Lucas pitched fairly for Bowersville but his support failed him at crucial times.

Idle Hour Club softball team defeated the Carroll-Binder Co. team of the National League 13 to 2 in a softball game played at the Mulberry St. park Monday night.

The Carroll-Binder team threatened to score several times but Bradshaw's masterful pitching kept the heavy hitters subdued.

The Idle Hour Club will play the Critteron team of the National League Thursday evening the game starting at 6:30 o'clock.

N. Y. STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, July 22.—Except for a few feeble rallies in the stocks which have been under the heaviest selling pressure, general conditions in the stock market this morning were unchanged from yesterday's final period. The bulk of the active industrial stocks opened lower, rallied a point or so on the average, and then sank back to their original price levels. Short covering by the professionals was responsible chiefly for the firmer tone in Radio Keith, Chrysler, American Can, U. S. Steel, Standard Oil of New Jersey and other favorites.

Continuance of the hot weather, indifferent industrial and business reports, the failure of the grain and cotton markets to rally and the discouraging second quarter statements issued by Atlantic Refining Company and Westinghouse were the principal obstacles to public buying of industrial stocks.

This short-covering rally in the second hour brought American Can back to 124 3/4, up 1 1/2 from Monday's close; Consolidated Gas up 1 1/2 to 109 1/2; U. S. Steel to 163 3/4, up nearly a point; Vanadium to 95 3/4, up 2 1/4. On the whole, the market was dull but firm.

Wheat, corn and cotton dropped off to slightly lower levels and call money was unchanged at 2 per cent.

DAD'S GIRL

THE STORY OF A GIRL WHO DESERVED TO WIN

CHAPTER 56 She rather wished she had told him all about it before she accepted his ring, but at every attempt she had made, he had resolutely stopped her words. It made no difference to him—her past, he had insisted. All he asked for was her future.

But she wondered, Men were so erratic. One never knew how they would react to conditions. Now, Win, but she must not think of him, now. Only that she quite expected that Don would fall her in the same way—hoped that he wouldn't. She wondered, anyway, just what love was. The question of the ages. And of course, she couldn't answer it.

On the day of the first anniversary of her father's death, she sent a flowergram to New York, with instructions for the florist to decorate the graves of both her parents. In her heart were more love and reverence, than on that day, one year ago, of her father's obsequies. If he had watched from the vast beyond, the progress, the anguish and suffering, and the triumphs of his daughter, he must have rejoiced and been proud. She had proved herself worthy to be a Forester—worthy of the traditions and wealth—which he had denied her.

In her mail that morning, was a letter from Don. It was gay, humorous, possessive. The days had dragged like centuries, since she left. He spoke of his work, of some improvements he was making. She had given him so much inspiration, had raised his value of life to the superlative degree.

He had ridden out at sunrise that morning, alone, with her in spirit. How could he wait six weeks to see her—and a year to marry her? Let him know if he might come sooner—tomorrow, if possible. His heart stopped when he thought that she might forget him. Was she happy? Could he make her happier? She must write at once. And he was always, he devoted—Don. The signature swam before her eyes. He was a dear—and she belonged to him.

There was also a letter from Gregory. He wrote occasionally to inquire for her welfare, and she appreciated his concern. She opened the letter eagerly. He was now her only connection with that other world—it seemed so very far away, now. Her brow puckered in a frown as she read the short message. It was an urgent summons to come at once to New York—an important matter required her immediate presence. Puzzled and concerned over what the important matter could be, as well as disliking to ask for several days' absence from the office, she showed the letter to Randall. She knew that the affair must be urgent, as Gregory would never have asked her to leave her work without further explanation. Of course, Randall could not silence her perplexities, but readily consented to her going. She packed a week end bag and took the first east-bound limited.

Arrived in New York, she went directly to Gregory's office. He seemed surprised to see her so soon, but greeted her cordially and put her gently into a chair, when he saw how tired and anxious she was.

"I hope my message did not disturb nor frighten you," he apologized with concern. "But what is it, Mr. Gregory? Has something dreadful happened? Has Win—" she could not go on. All the fond memories of him rushed back to her with a force that nearly suffocated her. She thought she had almost forgotten. Gregory smiled paternally. "Nothing dreadful, Clara Dee. And it concerns only you. But I have important news for you."

She experienced a great sensation of relief at his words, felt that nothing he could now say would effect her much. He opened a drawer of his desk and drew out a large document.

"About a year ago," he resumed, "I read to you your late father's last will—at least, that part of it, which it was my duty to read to you. Here, I have the rest of it, which he requested that I read to you one year later—providing I deemed you worthy of hearing it. He left the affair entirely to my judgment, which compliment I appreciate immensely, although it has proved to be an easier task than I had feared. He asked me to judge you as if you were my own daughter, in carrying out his wishes."

"At the time I was very much opposed to his plan, but I have come to understand his strange bequest, and to admit that his was a splendid idea. His instructions were, that if, a year after his death, I believed that you had succeeded in overcoming poverty and adverse circumstances, had been honorable and true to his ideals, and had proved your fitness for the Forester name and fortune, I should read to you this paper."

As he adjusted his glasses and rustled the thick, crackling parchment, Clara Dee leaned forward in her chair, with wide eyes and parted lips. Tears spilled over her eyelashes and trickled, unheeded down her white cheeks. Gregory cleared his throat and began to read slowly, with the same careful enunciation with which he had read the will to her a year ago.

"In the judgment of my esteemed and beloved friend, John Gregory, or his appointed successor in the event of his death, after one year from my death, my beloved and only daughter, Clara Dee Forester, has fulfilled my wishes and ambitions for her, she shall become sole heir to the following estates and holdings—" and there followed a long list, the value of which could only be hastily estimated at many millions.

Then—"If for any reason my daughter has proved herself unworthy in the mind of my friend, and please God, may she not, these same may be disposed of as follows—" Gregory stopped and removed his spectacles, dabbed at his eyes with his handkerchief and concluded, "no need to read the rest, of course. If ever a girl fulfilled the prayers and hopes of a father, under the most difficult conditions anyone could conceive, you have, Clara Dee, in my opinion."

There was silence in the great room for several long moments, only a small clock on the desk ticked away impatiently.

When Clara Dee spoke, her voice sounded faint and unreal, even to herself. "I don't know how I can ever thank you, Mr. Gregory."

"For what?" he asked brusquely, to conceal his emotion. "For adhering so closely to my father's wishes."

"What else could I have done?" "You could easily have said that I did not deserve such a fortune, and I'll wager some of that would have been yours, if in your opinion, I hadn't earned it."

He neither admitted nor denied the truth of her statement, but became conspicuously occupied with his papers.

"Are you quite sure that I deserve this honor and—this wealth,"

she added wistfully. "Without a trace of a doubt! I've watched you and hoped and prayed for you as if you were my own, you had at stake, but for your own sake, you were given a harsh trial and often nothing but my promise to your father kept me from helping you. You never told me all, but I suspected more than you know, at times, and I'll warrant that not every girl could come up to the surface with her head up, as you have."

"I can only thank you again, Mr. Gregory."

"And now, would you like to go home? Under your father's orders, everything has been kept in readiness for your return. You see, he expected that you would return. I have even re-established many of your old servants, including your personal maid." He turned and spoke a brief order into the phone.

"But my work—" "You have no use for a stenographic position, now, Clara Dee."

"But I loved my work, I had just become independent enough to enjoy everything. It would hardly be fair to the company—"

"My dear, there are hundreds of competent girls who would appreciate the opportunity of taking your position; and if business interests you so much, do you not think that discharging and investing of millions requires an alert brain and considerable time?" he reminded her. "Of course, a vast fortune can be used with unscrupulous disregard, but that is not the way I should expect you to use it now. Your training will be invaluable to you in the future."

"You are right," she admitted thoughtfully. "What a pleasure it will be to carry on for Dad, if you will help and advise me, I shall build an everlasting monument to his memory. How he must have loved me, to have made these plans and to have had the courage to carry them out. I see it all now, and understand why he did it. One has only to watch the girls and boys of my set for a few days—or nights, to understand his fears and plans. And I am afraid his fears were justified. Do you know, Mr. Gregory, I've always felt that he had some great purpose in his seemingly harsh treatment of me."

The attorney nodded kindly. "Now, aren't you tired enough to go home?"

"Yes, I am, please."

ern Ohio, West Virginia, Virginia and into Maryland, the middle west also has suffered.

The percentage of rainfall (to normal) during the growing season from May 20 to the latest record, July 21, is given by Kincer as follows:

Southwestern Virginia, 23 per cent. Western West Virginia, 19 per cent.

Eastern Kentucky, 22 to 30 per cent. Southern Indiana, Illinois, 25 to 30 per cent.

Western Tennessee, 2 per cent. Southern Arkansas and Northern Louisiana, 7 to 13 per cent. Eastern Texas, 23 to 33 per cent. Northern Mississippi, 10 to 17 per cent.

Southern Kansas, 30 per cent. Southeastern Nebraska, and Southwestern Iowa under 33 1-3 per cent.

Northern Indiana, Illinois, 50 to 75 per cent. Ohio varied, 20 to 50 per cent. Southern Michigan, 50 to 75 per cent.

Minnesota, 65 2-3 per cent. Eastern Iowa, 50 per cent to over normal.

North Dakota, 40 to 67 per cent. Eastern Montana, 30 to 65 per cent.

South Dakota, under 50 per cent. Records of forty years standing—the earliest weather bureau records of all stations within states are broken by the drought in Virginia, West Virginia, and Kentucky. Maryland, Kincer found, experienced almost as dry weather in 1925 and 1926.

The severity of the heat is shown by the fact that maximum temperatures ranged from 98 to 101 from Thursday to Sunday in an area from Nebraska to the middle Atlantic Coast.

COLUMBUS, O., July 22.—Ohio is experiencing one of the driest seasons in history and July has been one of the driest months since the United States weather bureau was established here, according to William H. Alexander, meteorologist of the station.

Rainfall for the season is three inches below normal, causing serious damage to farm crops throughout the state. Not a drop of rain has been reported from any section of Ohio during the past week, with the exception of slight local showers last night.

Southwestern Ohio has been hardest hit by the long drought, the weather bureau records show. Northwestern and central Ohio have also suffered by the dry period. The northeastern district along Lake Erie has not suffered as much as other sections of the state although the amount of rainfall in that region is far below normal.

Only in four counties in the state—Shelby, Stark, Marion and Pickaway Counties—has the rainfall approached the normal amount. Rainfall in these counties has ranged from 3.06 to 5.83 inches for the past six weeks. Most of this precipitation has been due to severe local thundershowers.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—The capital continued today to sweat under the abnormal heat of the past few days, but the weather bureau held out some hope of relief late this afternoon.

The peak of yesterday's temperature was 103 at 4 p. m., at the weather bureau, several degrees cooler than downtown. At the clock at Pennsylvania Avenue and Fourteenth Street, about the average for the month on the street, the thermometer read 108 degrees at that hour.

DETROIT, July 22.—Thunder showers today had brought relief to the sweltering Detroiters, who, for the past two days, have been suffering from high temperatures of about 95 degrees.

Two deaths and more than ten prostrations were reported yesterday when the mercury equalled its Sunday climb. One other death was caused by drowning.

BOSTON, July 22.—Slightly lower temperature followed today in the wake of a series of thundershowers over New England last night which caused the deaths of two persons, injury to several others, and did thousands of dollars of property damage in a score of cities and towns.

DES MOINES, Ia., July 22.—Cooling temperatures, the result of a slow rain yesterday today gave Iowa's much needed relief from temperatures which have hovered near one hundred degrees for almost a week.

The Theater

Ernest Truex, now playing in "Lysistrata" at the Forty-fourth St. Theater in New York, is a diplomat of the stage who might be more successful in promoting friendly relations between the United States and Great Britain than real career man.

Truex was born in Missouri and as been on the stage since he was five, and he is now rated as the only American actor who is exactly as much at home in Piccadilly Circus and the English provinces as he is in Times Square and the American "sticks".

An instance in point is related in connection with his experience in London. After he had been leasing English theater-goers for

ago. After it was all over neither would admit that it had "topped" the battle that they had waged seventeen years ago when the story was first produced, although they both admitted it was a first rate fight.

Farnum has fully recovered from a long illness and is planning to re-enter pictures, playing a leading role in "Ten Nights in a Bar-room." Santshi has also been signed for a part in the same film, which is to be made by an independent company.

Having been confined to her home for the last two months following a breakdown, Renee Adoree is now well on the road to recovery. Her physicians hope she will be able to return to work soon.

Mr. Paul B. Owens, who has been employed by the Kroger Grocery Co., has accepted a position with the Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co.

Miss Mary Golden is leaving soon for a trip of three weeks to St. Paul, and Minneapolis. Dr. Austin Patterson was among the passengers on the American Chemical Society Convention special, which met with a serious wreck near Salinas, Cal. Dr. Patterson escaped with only a few minor bruises.

Mr. Harry Cromwell entertained fifteen members of the Springfield police force at his home here.

two or three years following his arrival in 1926, somebody suggested that he should attempt a real English role instead of the American type part which he had been modestly following. That seemed like sacrilege and even friendly Londoners looked aghast at the thought of an outsider playing English drawing-room comedy in London.

Nevertheless Truex clenched his teeth and made his next appearance in the title role of "Good Morning, Bill," a play that was so English it hurt. The drama dealers of Fleet St., gasped, gulped and gazed and then hurried back to their offices to report that the American had actually turned the trick—he was one of them.

Now, after making such a stupendous success there, Truex has returned to his own country a respected and highly popular figure both the English and American theater. He will make return visits to London and half of any London theater audience would tell you he is an Englishman.

Years ago, in "The Good Little Girl," Mr. Truex was called upon to play Mary Pickford four times a day, before Mary became America's sweetheart on the screen. In that same cast were two other struggling young actresses destined to be heard from. Their names were Lillian and Dorothy Gish.

William Farnum and Tom Santshi were two interested spectators who watched Gary Cooper and William Bord, the stage actor, maul each other for the famous fight scene in "The Spoilers" a few days

EIGHT INDICTMENTS RETURNED BY SPECIAL GRAND JURY HERE

Eight indictments were returned by the grand jury for the May term of court which held a recess session Monday for the purpose of clearing the docket of a number of minor criminal cases.

True bills were found against the following persons: Floyd Watson, grand larceny for alleged theft of household goods valued at $100 from Homer Leavell, last February 5; Robert E. Pack, removing mortgaged property from the county; Ellis Jones, Ralph Jones and Ralph Jackson, joint indictment for burglary and larceny for alleged theft

DEATH CLAIMS MRS. SIMEON H. DEACON FROM LONG ILLNESS

Mrs. Mary Ann Smith Deacon, 78, wife of Simeon H. Deacon, died at her home, 672 S. Detroit St., Tuesday morning at 6:10 o'clock. Mrs. Deacon had been in failing health for several months but had been in a serious condition since February. Death was due to a complication of diseases.

Mrs. Deacon was born in Buckinghamshire, England, August 6, 1851. She came to the United States when she was fifteen years of age, first settling in Cincinnati and later coming to Xenia. She was the last of her immediate family. Her marriage to Mr. Deacon took place sixty-one years ago. She was a member of Christ Episcopal Church and Phoenix Rebekah Lodge.

She is survived by her husband and two daughters, Mrs. W. E. Swabb and Mrs. Charles Haas, both of Xenia. Funeral services will be held at the late home Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock with burial in Miami Cemetery at Corwin. Friends may call at the home Wednesday evening after 7 o'clock.

Troop No. 41, Boy Scouts of America, will hold its regular meeting Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock at the Scout Cabin. It is announced by Scoutmaster Carl Pramer.

Kenneth Swigart, Scout scribe, was winner in the contest conducted by the troop, with David Cherry, Jr., following in second place. This gives the winner a week of free camping at Camp Miami. Troop 41 has had the following Scouts at Camp Miami this year: Arthur Harner, Harold Miller, David Cherry, Richard Adair, Clinton Adair, Robert Pramer, John Hupman, Kenneth Thomas, William Anderson and Kenneth Swigart.

of twenty-three fleeces of wool valued at $45 from a barn on the farm of R. D. Williamson, Greene County representative in the state legislature, May 7.

Otis Shearer and James R. Pierce, grand larceny, joint indictment for alleged theft of 320 pounds of copper wire from the Pennsylvania Railroad Co.; Albert D. Otto, grand larceny for alleged theft of 320 pounds of copper wire from the Pennsylvania Railroad Co.; Charles Martin and William Baber, separate indictments for grand larceny for theft of two automobile wheels and two tires, worth $35, property of the Xenia Iron and Metal Co.; George W. Rogers, highway robbery, for the alleged assault of Edward B. Scott and theft of $22.

A case of receiving stolen property against Mrs. Lulu Tatum was ignored. The grand jury examined ten witnesses covering nine cases.

COUNTY SUES HEIRS TO RECOVER FUNDS

Heirs of L. I. Frazier, former Clinton County trucking contractor, who died in a mysterious dynamite cap explosion after his indictment on forgery charges, were sued for recovery of $11,150 by C. L. Swaim, prosecuting attorney of Clinton County, Monday.

The money sought to be recovered was that alleged to have been paid illegally to Frazier who was indicted on charges of having presented fraudulent bills and having received payment from the county for stone that was never delivered. The suit is one of twenty-five civil actions being instituted against persons and firms for recovery of money due Clinton County.

FEAST YOUR EYES ON COLOR

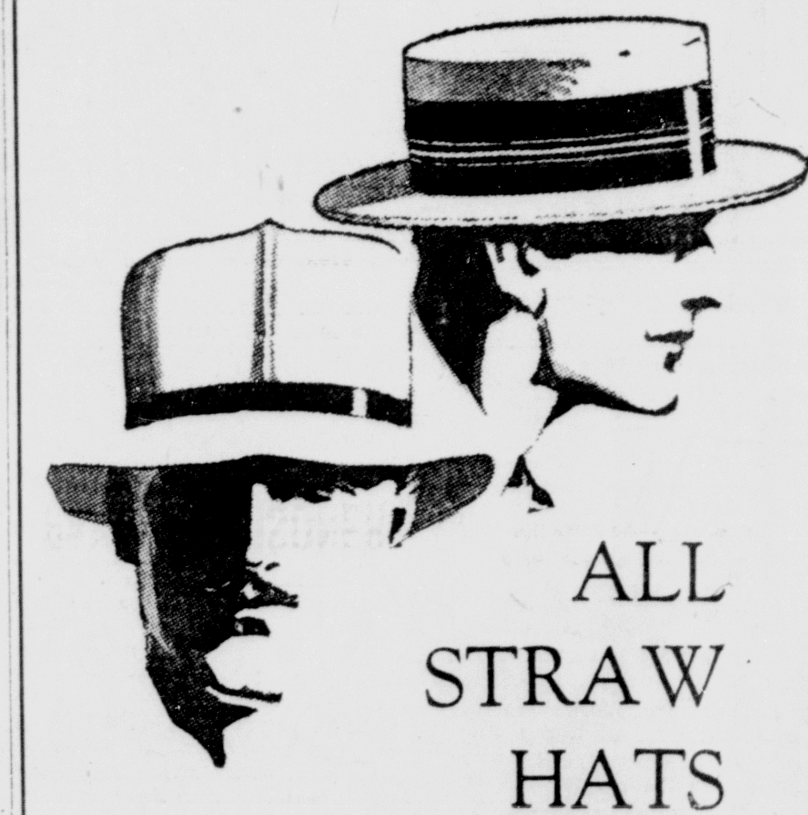

REVEL IN EVERY
GROVE PARK INN

Like mile-high piles of iridescent velvet, these mountains glow with color. Native wild blooms whose infinite variety defies the botanist's catalogue and shames the artist's palette. . . Pisgah, the Rat, the Great Smokies, Mt. Mitchell and all the other age-old huskies of the earth have softened . . . brightened to welcome Summer days. Gaze upon them from the terrace of Grove Park Inn, walk about them, ride among them, drive along the rock-churned streams that ripple at their feet. Never is nature's brush more prodigal with color than when Summer pays her visit to the Land of the Sky. For your less meditative, but just as joyous moments, there's marvelous golf on the Asheville Country Club course, smoothly-rolling, emerald-green front lawn of the Inn . . . while cooling breezes play . . . tennis, archery, canoeing, swimming . . . take your choice. Thrill to brilliant social life among genial sophisticates, past masters in the art of living. . . Serene on Sunset Mountain, the Inn is a perfect setting for this pageant of life and beauty. Accommodations leave nothing of luxurious comfort to be desired. Flawless service is rendered by a world-famed staff. French chefs and Southern cooks merge their skill to maintain incomparable cuisine. Hospitality rules . . . your every wish is gratified . . . especially when you yearn for perfect rest, absolute and undisturbed. Cool, sound sleep comes with the night—under blankets, because you need them. The Inn operates on the American Plan throughout the year. Reservations are desired in advance.

MAIL PILOT KILLED WHEN PLANE CRASHES IN OHIO; FOG BLAMED

Nature Freak Which
Caused Low Ceiling
Theory Of Flyers

HURON, O., July 22.—William Frederick Martin, 26, of Pontiac, Mich., was killed today when his Cleveland-to-Bay City, Mich., air mail plane crashed on a farm two miles west of here.

A thick, murky fog which was hanging over this region was believed to have been responsible for the accident.

The wrecked plane and its dead pilot were found by George Beatty on whose farm the crash occurred.

Martin's body was seriously mutilated in the crash. It was so tightly wedged in the plane's wreckage that rescuers were forced to use an automobile to loosen the wreckage and extricate the body.

The pilot's neck, both arms and legs were broken, and his chest was crushed.

The crash apparently occurred about 4:30 o'clock this morning. Beatty said he heard a plane flying low over his house at about that time. He said he looked out to catch sight of the craft, but the weather was so murky that the plane was hidden from view.

The plane Martin was flying was a Pitcairn, Super-Mail, operated by the Thompson Aeronautical Corporation. The registry number was NC-643B.

CLEVELAND, O., July 22.—A freak of nature that caused the flying "ceiling" to drop 2,500 feet in an hour was believed by aviators here today to have been responsible for the death crash this morning near Huron of William Frederick Martin, 26, of Pontiac, Mich., air mail pilot between Cleveland and Bay City.

Martin received his last weather report at 3 a. m., today, officials here stated. At that time the "ceiling" was 2,700 feet. An hour later the "ceiling" fell to 200 feet, but Martin had taken off in the meantime from the Cleveland Municipal Airport without knowing the changed weather conditions.

The National Air Transport mail plane to Chicago which took off a short time before Martin, was forced down at Vickery, O. until weather conditions became better.

RESORT KEEPER IS GUN BATTLE VICTIM

CHICAGO, July 22.—An inquest was ordered today into the slaying of Peter Inzerio, resort keeper known as "ash can Pete" who was shot to death in his saloon last night during a spirited gun battle with his assassins.

Presumably the assassins entered when he was alone. Bullet holes dotted the walls and indicated there had been a terrific battle.

Inzerio was found on the floor of his establishment with six bullets in his body. He refused to tell who the assassins were and died on the way to a hospital.

MOVIE PRODUCERS TO TRADE PATENTS

PARIS, July 22.—German and American talking picture producers have signed a memorandum embodying terms for world-wide exchange in patent rights, it was announced here today by Will H. Hays, American movie "czar."

The memorandum followed an agreement which was reached here between American and German producers settling a long standing controversy over patents and copyrights.

Hays is returning to the United States tomorrow.

TWO DEAD, TWO SEVERELY HURT

MERCED, Cal., July 22.—Two persons are dead here today, a third is not expected to live and two others are suffering from severe burns as the result of a freak accident. The tragedy occurred when a radio aerial which they were moving came in contact with a high tension wire.

The dead, Mrs. Zelma Gaffery, 40, Jean Gaffery, 13, her niece, William Gaffery, 19, son of the dead woman, is near death. His two sisters, Aileen, 14, and Jane 12, were seriously burned.

LINGLE SLAYER?

Tommy Abbott and his wife, Irene, shown here, have been arrested in Chicago in the investigation into the slaying of Alfred Lingle, newspaper man. Abbott, sought secretly as the actual killer of Lingle, is also accused of the recent daring attack on Jack Zuta, gang leader, in the busiest section of Chicago's Loop.

ANTI-MERGER SIDE CHEERED BY POINTS SCORED IN BATTLE

Sheet And Tube Head
Ignorant Of Bonus
Paid Grace

YOUNGSTOWN, O., July 22.—Encouraged by a highly triumphant day in court, attorneys opposing the consolidation of Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co. with Bethlehem Steel Corporation today planned to press their fight for details of the merger negotiations.

The trial of the Cyrus S. Eaton-inspired injunction suit against the merger reached a high point yesterday with two revelations which were regarded by anti-mergers as important in their case.

One was the divulgence by Eugene G. Grace, Bethlehem president, that he received $1,623,753 in bonuses during 1929, and a total of $5,431,684 in the five and a half years from January 1, 1925 to June 30, 1930.

The other was the admission of Frank Purnell, president of Sheet and Tube, that neither he nor the directors of his company knew the amount of bonus Bethlehem paid its executives at the time Sheet and Tube directors voted to merge with Bethlehem.

Grace's compensation was admitted to the court records after a bitter two-day court struggle between opposing attorneys. Bethlehem counsel fought strenuously to keep Grace's bonus out of the testimony, and the anti-merger attorneys fought vigorously and successfully to have it recorded.

Purnell denied knowledge of the Bethlehem bonus figures in answers to questions asked by Judge David G. Jenkins, who called the Sheet and Tube executive as his own witness.

GOVERNOR CONFERS ON NEW EVIDENCE

SAN FRANCISCO, July 22.—With John MacDonald prepared to swear that he testified falsely against Thomas Mooney and Warren K. Billings, who are serving life terms in connection with the 1916 Preparedness Day bomb outrage here, Governor C. C. Young today was to confer with MacDonald's attorneys.

It is expected the conference will result in a reconsideration of the Mooney plea for a pardon. Although the state supreme court recently recommended against a pardon for Billings, that body yesterday unanimously agreed to hear his new plea for executive clemency and to hear MacDonald's story.

HAS AUTO BUT NO PLACE TO RIDE

Sultan Of Jimma Gets Car First And Will Get Roads Next; May Open Market

WASHINGTON, July 22.—His Right Royal Majesty Abba Jifar, Sultan of Jimma in Southern Ethiopia, Abyssinia, has bought himself an automobile.

It is a vivid red. There is not a road in the sultan's rich province, but it is the light and apple of Abba's eyes. All he has to do now is have the roads built in Jimma, and this he intends to do.

The machine, which cost the sultan about $3,600, was bought only after a mental struggle. It cost Abba $624 to have his machine transported from Addis Ababa to his home in Jimma, but it went most of the way under its own power, the expense was incurred when the sultan had a special raft built to ferry his new possession to its destination.

The sale of the automobile is regarded as of a good deal of importance in America as it opens the Jimma market to a hitherto virtually unknown product. Roads are regarded as inevitable as the sultan must have somewhere to drive his car.

VOTERS IN DETROIT DETERMINE FUTURE OF ATTACKED MAYOR

Recall Election Held
After Bitter War
Over Radio

DETROIT, July 22.—Detroit's voters today are busy spending between $75,000 and $100,000 in a special recall election to decide the sole question of whether or not Mayor Charles Bowles shall be ousted from his $15,000 a year office.

It was the first time in the history of the municipality, the fourth largest in the United States, that a mayor has been faced with what can be termed impeachment.

The battle of the ballots climaxed one of the most bitterly fought mayoralty campaigns in this history of the state. Nightly, the avowed opponents of Mayor Bowles broadcast attacks in radio speeches and nightly the defenders of the city executive replied to them and made new allegations of fraud were hurled back and forth freely. Both parties also "stumped" the city and the Ku Klux Klan openly held a mass meeting to further the cause of Mayor Bowles.

If Mayor Bowles is recalled, another election with an additional expense of between $75,000 and $100,000, will be necessitated to choose his successor.

There are approximately 450,000 registered voters in Detroit. More than 50,000 signed the recall petitions which are responsible for the mayor's present political difficulties. City election officials estimated that only about 210,000 would be attracted to the voting booths, which close about dusk tonight.

Should Mayor Bowles poll the majority of votes in the election, it would mean a "moral victory" and he would be allowed to retain his position as executive of Detroit.

Recent appointments of the mayor are said to be the reason for the predicament of the city head. In a radio speech, Robert Oakman, a former ally, and influential real estate broker, attacked the appointment of John Gillespie, commissioner of public works.

The land dealers charged that Gillespie had a "lurid record" in politics. Charges that Mayor Bowles had failed to carry out campaign pledges were also made. The mayor, in answering the attacks, said that he had done his best to fulfill them and that he had endeavored to run the city "for the people of the city."

FOUR DIE OF COLD- SOMEFLACE ELSE

SANTIAGO, Chile, July 22.—While North America sweated, Chile and the Argentine shivered. Heavy snows forty-four miles from here have caused the death of four persons.

The cold sweep of the past few weeks has continued in the Argentine and especially in the Andes region, where much suffering has been reported from the cold weather.

PARIS, July 22.—Rainy weather, in some cases damaging to crops, has persisted from here to the Azores the past week, the meteorological office announced today. The rainfall in France for the month of July so far has nearly achieved a record, with further downpours in prospect.

AGED MAN KILLED

DOVER, O., July 22.—Struck by an automobile which was driven by Miss Lulu Shutt, Strasburg, Jonas Allison, 79, is dead here as the result of internal injuries which he sustained in the accident. The girl was exonerated.

BODY RECOVERED

VAN WERT, O., July 22.—The body of Roy L. Bush, 20, of Marion, Ind., who disappeared several days ago from the home of William Ditto, whom he was visiting, was recovered from a quarry pool here late yesterday.

HOW TO BEAT HEAT:

WASHINGTON, July 22.—

Here are ten rules for hot weather comfort compiled by Surgeon Cumming of the U. S. Public Health Service:

- "Dress as lightly as possible.
- "Imbibe long, cool drinks.
- "Keep your temper.
- "Keep windows closed.
- "Use discretion in getting out of the heat.
- "Keep the spinal cord protected; wear hats outdoors.
- "Use discretion about work and exercise in the heat.
- "Eat what you please, but don't overeat.
- "Guard against infected food.
- "Be disoriented, physically, mentally, emotionally."

DERBY PLANES WAIT FOR CLEAR WEATHER BEFORE NEXT START

Little Rock Pilot Wins
Second Leg Into New York

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., July 22.—The take-off of sixteen remaining entrants in the all American derby was postponed until at least 11 a. m. today following a conference of pilots. Bad weather along the route to Cincinnati caused the delay and it is possible the start may not be made until tomorrow.

Adverse weather reports were received and Lee Schoonhar, referee of the flight put it up to the pilots to decide on the start.

Most of the planes are ships built for speed with ability to stand bad flying conditions sacrificed to obtain higher flying velocity.

With reports of heavy clouds and local thunder showers throughout the Middle Atlantic States, the delay was voted unanimously.

The flight today is to take the planes to Cincinnati, 600 miles away. From there they go to Little Rock, Houston, San Angelo, Texas, Douglas, Ariz., Los Angeles, Ogden, Lincoln, Chicago and back to Detroit, where the 5,520 mile air jaunt started yesterday.

Roaring into New York from Buffalo at the rate of 200 miles an hour, Lee Gehlbach, of Little Rock, won the second leg of the derby and he also captured the first lap of the race, from Detroit to Buffalo.

Harvey Mumford of Hammondsport, N. Y., crashed at Kingsley, Pa., but was uninjured, although he was put out of the race. Edgar Todd of Pueblo, Colo., got off the course and came down at Norwich, Conn. He hoped to join the flyers here today before the hop.

Second best time was made by James Wedell of New Orleans for the derby to date and Herman Hamer of La Salle, Ill., is in third place.

First prize of $15,000, second $7,000 and third $3,000 are the awards.

TRUCK KILLS WOMAN

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, O., July 22.—Injuries which she received when she was struck by a truck that was driven by Albert Blackburn, 30, of Middlebourne, today had caused the death of Miss Mary Troll, 67.

Authorities indicated that Blackburn will be exonerated at an inquest which will be held today. Miss Troll's extreme carelessness was blamed for the accident.

YOUNGSTOWN MUNICIPAL JUDGE ACCUSED OF BOOZE CONSPIRACY

YOUNGSTOWN, O., July 22.—Federal action was anticipated here today against a municipal judge, named by Mayor Joseph L. Heffernan as the man who received quantities of liquor that was stolen from the police station here a year ago.

Mayor Heffernan has stated that evidence, gathered during an investigation here last July by James M. Doran, former prohibition commissioner, is now on file in Washington. He has indicated that the evidence is sufficient for an indictment.

RELIEF FROM HEAT ENJOYED BY OHIO; EAST IS SUFFERING

Cooler Weather Is Promised As Rains Move Eastward

COLUMBUS, O., July 22.—Relief from the scorching heat which has enveloped Ohio for the past week and which has caused scores of prostrations, drownings, and combustion fires throughout the state, was promised by U. S. Weather Bureau officials today. A light shower of short duration fell here last night and heavy thunder showers and cooler weather were predicted for tonight.

The maximum temperature here yesterday was 99.

Many Ohio cities are suffering from depleted water supplies.

PITTSBURGH, July 22.—"Rain... cooling breezes..."

Pittsburghers trooped to work today over rain-soaked pavements, cheered by the promise of more rain and lots of it, accompanied by breezy zephyrs from the northwest. The weather man made the promise and the torrid spell appeared to be broken.

PHILADELPHIA, July 22.—A water famine confronted Philadelphia today as the terrific heat wave continued unabated leaving a toll of twelve dead in its wake in this district.

The water shortage became so acute when the normal consumption of water reached 850,000,000 gallons instead of the usual 360,000,000 daily that stringent measures were taken to alleviate the situation. Motor squads of police were sent throughout the city to shut off open hydrants and scores of persons including many children

FATHER SLAYS HIS CHILDREN BY DROWNING

Three Submerged In Pool;
Unable To Provide,
He Says

MARTINSBURG, W. Va., July 22.—Sullenly defiant, Taylor Hott, 35-year-old laborer, was held under charges of murder today following discovery of the bodies of his three small children submerged in the waters of a quarry pool here yesterday.

In a confession said to have been made by Hott last yesterday, the father of Gertrude, 7, Calvin, 6, and Boyd, 5, told a tale that county authorities found difficult in squaring with results of the autopsies.

"I killed them because we were unable to provide for them properly," Hott was quoted as having told Assistant Prosecutor Charles N. Campbell of Berkeley County.

"I took the children out for a walk in the afternoon. When we reached the quarry I told them they ought to go in swimming. When they said they didn't want to, I grabbed them, one at a time, tied handkerchiefs around their throats so they couldn't scream, and then threw them into the water."

Although wounds inflicted by a knife and bruises made by a blunt instrument were reported found on the little bodies, Hott steadfastly maintained that he had not struck or stabbed any of the children.

SWIMMER DROWNS

COLUMBUS, O., July 22.—Franklin County's drowning toll mounted today with the death of Lafayette Towns, 23, who perished in a quarry pond near the Big Four Railroad yards here yesterday.

Towns and two companions were swimming in the pool when Towns disappeared and did not reappear. His body was recovered an hour later.

BLOOD TEST TO REVEAL PARENTS

While parents fret, Chicago doctors are endeavoring to unravel the Bamberger-Watkins baby tangle. William Watkins and his wife declare that they discovered a tag on their baby, marked "Bamberger," but the Bambergers insist that the baby which they brought home from the hospital is theirs. A nurse who scrubbed the tag off the baby taken home by the Bambergers located it and it was marked "Watkins." Blood tests are to be made to settle the disputes. Photo shows, left to right, Mrs. Charles Bamberger and her son, George; Mrs. William Watkins, with her son, Charles, and Dr. Arnold Keegal.

VOTER DROPS DEAD

DETROIT, July 22.—A woman dropped dead in a voting booth here today a short time after she had cast her ballot in the special recall election which seeks to oust Mayor Charles Bowles from office.

The intense heat is believed to have caused the woman's death.

Though momentary relief from the heat was given by thundershowers the mercury began to climb again today.

ACCUSE MAN OF DEATH OF GIRL BY STRANGLING

Leads Police To Body
Of Sweetheart In
Parked Auto

DETROIT, July 22.—Charged with strangling his 21-year-old sweetheart to death, Ellis P. Hudson, 25, hospital orderly, and formerly of Dixon, Tenn. today maintains his innocence as he sits in his cell at the city prison here.

He surrendered to police last yesterday and led them to his parked automobile where the girl, Lillian Ferguson, attractive clinic worker, lay dead.

"I don't know how it happened," he insisted today. "We went to a picture show. That's all I remember."

Authorities found the girl had been strangled to death with a handkerchief, which bore the monogram "E." The machine was parked on a busy thoroughfare for more than twelve hours with the girl's body locked in it and hundreds of passersby failed to discover the tragedy.

The girl's mother, who collapsed when she was informed of the alleged murder, moaned, "I always told Lillian that it was wrong for her to meet Hudson. I felt it. It must have been a mother's intuition."

SUBWAY TRAFFIC IS HALTED BY WRECK

NEW YORK, July 22.—One of the worst trips in the history of New York's subways today held up thousands of workers in sweltering stations after a car in a seven-coach train was derailed. One woman was injured and panic seized hundreds of passengers until guards quieted them.

The accident occurred near Wall Street and delayed many workers in the financial district.

Heat Wave Helps To Spur Action Upon Limitations

WASHINGTON, July 22.—After ratifying the London naval treaty by an overwhelming vote and ending its special session, the senate today joined the house on a vacation to last until the seventy-first congress reconvenes in December.

Ratification of the pact officially bound the United States, along with Great Britain and Japan, to mutual limitations on the battleships, cruisers, aircraft carriers, submarines and destroyers. Proponents of the treaty declared the limitations gave the United States an actual parity with England and a superiority over Japan but treaty foes protested the British were given a superiority and Japan parity with America.

The tremendous heat wave in Washington, with temperatures soaring over the hundred mark, helped to terminate the special session. The final adjournment came rather unexpectedly and administration leaders abandoned fight to secure confirmation of three members, named by President Hoover to the new federal power commission, with several other lesser nominations.

The senate adjourned with Democratic spokesmen threatening fights next December against presidential appointments to both the power commission and the newly reorganized tariff commission. The president probably will name recess appointees to the tariff commission but the federal power commission will lie dormant during the summer, because recess appointments will not be in order.

RETIRED EDITOR IS CLAIMED BY HEAT

DETROIT, July 22.—The death of Philip H. Reid, aged 65, retired journalist and former managing editor of the Detroit Free Press, was attributed to the intense heat by doctors today.

Reid, a graduate of Brown University at Providence, R. I., and one-time reporter for the Providence Journal, died suddenly late last night. Although he had been in failing health, doctors said that the high temperatures caused him to succumb.

STRIKE THREATENS

DUBLIN, July 22.—The Free State Government intervened to avert a strike of railway men all over southern Ireland scheduled for today. Renewed conferences were arranged between the disputing factions, with the result that action on the proposed strike was delayed until midnight tonight.

CLOUDS SHIELD SUN IN COUNTY; YELLOW SPRINGS GETS RAIN

Mercury Drops; Nation
Feels Drought; Ohio
Suffers Badly

While the rest of the country received only light sprinkles, rain, the good, quiet soaking kind, fell in Yellow Springs for three hours Tuesday morning, relieving the parched earth and sweltering humanity.

It rained, really rained, from 8 until 11 o'clock, while clouds giving promise of cooling downpours passed over much of the rest of Greene County's heat baked area. Yellow Springs had another hard shower at noon.

Rains, however, falling over various sections of the state, broke the backbone of the summer's second intense heat wave, which yesterday sent the mercury in the government thermometers at the weather recording station at the State Fish Hatchery on the Springfield Pike to a little more than 103 degrees. The same instruments registered 103 degrees Sunday afternoon.

Between 3 o'clock Monday afternoon when the mercury rose to over 103, and 8 o'clock Tuesday morning, there was an official temperature drop of 24 degrees. The mercury in the government thermometer stood at 69 when Weatherman Ernest Harner made his twenty-four hour period reading at 8 o'clock.

In Xenia light sprinkles fell Tuesday morning. Jamestown, Cedarville, Clifton, Spring Valley and Bellbrook were also passed by when the weather man passed out his quota of rain, with the exception of fine sprinkles which failed to lay the dust.

Water consumption in Xenia Monday reached 1,255,000 gallons, which was below the marks set Saturday and Sunday.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—The country today continued in the throes of a drought which, in some sections, has smashed all records of forty years standing. Despite relief through showers to some parts of the nation, the drought is unbroken, irreparable damage has been done to crops, many cities and towns are suffering from water shortage and heat has taken its toll of lives.

An analysis of weather records by J. B. Kincer, chief of the agricultural division of the U. S. Weather Bureau, for International News Service today revealed the startling extent of the long period of dry weather.

Although the seriousness of the situation has become apparent only recently, Kincer's records disclosed that the drought actually began last December in an area extending from the lower Mississippi valley northeastward to Maryland. Every month has added to the deficiency of rainfall.

The most remarkable figure is that for Memphis, Tenn. The weather bureau there reports that rainfall for the last nine weeks has been but two percent of normal. This is said to be an all-time record.

Only two sections of the country apparently have escaped the blight of the drought. Although there has been dry weather in south Atlantic states, relief came through showers and suffering there is less than many other places, Kincer said. New England also has escaped the blight, he said.

While the path of the most serious drought has moved from the lower Mississippi Valley through Tennessee, Kentucky, Southwest-

JACKSON, O'BRIEN COMPLETE DAY IN AIR

ST. LOUIS, July 22.—Dale "Red" Jackson and Forrest O'Brien, seeking to win back their world endurance flight honors from the flying Hunter brothers of Sparta, Ill., completed their first twenty-four hours in the air at 7:11 a. m. today.

A long journey lay in front of the former record holders, however, as they must stay among the clouds until 8:11 a. m. on August 13 in order to set a new world's mark.

The "Greater St. Louis" demonstrated its airworthiness on the first day in the air, easily riding out the thundershowers in this district late yesterday afternoon and evening.

EIGHTEEN DROWN

BRYAN, O., July 22.—Ohio's drowning toll of last week-end stood at eighteen today following the recovery from the St. Joseph River of the body of Royal Gifford, 31, of Pioneer, near here. It is believed the man was drowned Sunday.

Realty Head Cites 20 Reasons For Home Owning.

There are twenty good reasons why people everywhere should own their own homes, says Herbert U. Nelson, Executive Secretary of the National Association of Real Estate Boards in their recent story for the public.

Mr. Nelson has drawn up a list of the things that you get when you own a home and don't get when you rent—and he says he can add more items to this list without thinking very hard.

So you may get a mortgage when you buy or build a home, but you also get the following:

1. Financial Independence—More people have started on the road to financial independence through home ownership, than in any other way.
2. Security—In times of stress the home is always something to fall back on.
3. A Cash Equity—A well bought home is as good as a savings account.
4. Credit—Home owner can open charge accounts, etc., without difficulty.
5. Peace of Mind—Based on the knowledge that provision has been made for your family.
6. Social Background For Your Children.
7. Play Place For Your Children—Without criticism from landlord.
8. Development of Responsibility—Home owner feels more responsibility with regard to his dwelling and the neighborhood.
9. Interest in Civic and Municipal Affairs—This is good for the home-owner.
10. Chance for Individual Expression—Exterior and interior of the home can be made to express individuality of owner.
11. Permanent Environment—Making neighbors and friends whose friendships last over a period of years.
12. Habits of Thrift.
13. Healthful Exercise—Pride of possession inspires work around home and garden, which is healthful for indoor business people.
14. Character Development—Responsibilities of ownership in meeting emergencies and financial payments, and in making repairs, develop business acumen and character.
15. Independence—(other than financial). The home-owner can order his life as he wishes, with no restrictions or interference from landlord.
16. Savings—Statistics prove that one can occupy and pay for a home at approximately the same cost as he can rent an apartment of the same size as the house. When he has completed his payments, he lives in the owned home much more cheaply than in rented quarters. Thus, over a period of years, he is money ahead by buying and occupying a home.
17. Beautiful Furnishings—Higher quality furniture and drapes can be purchased because they fit into a decorative scheme that will last for years, instead of having to be changed periodically as one moves about from place to place.
18. No Restrictions—On Size of Family—Landlord cannot limit the number of children, or the total number of occupants of the home.
19. Pets—The home-owner can have as many pets as he wishes, both indoors and outdoors without asking anyone's permission.
20. Possible Income—The lot might be utilized financially such as by building a garage to hold two or more cars, and by renting a portion of it.

Commission to act on plan suggested in light question

Assurance that the city will take action regarding the question of opening negotiations with the Dayton Power and Light Co. for purchase of its distribution system, was given business men attending a dinner meeting of the Xenia Retail Merchants' Association Monday evening, by Dr. F. M. Chambliss, commission president, and Mayor Jacob Kany.

About twenty men attending the meeting passed a resolution to the effect that the association file a formal request with city commission to remove from its files a resolution passed by the merchants' body two months ago, favoring purchase of the distribution system, and act upon it.

Mayor Kany said Tuesday morning that the matter will be taken up by commission at its regular bi-monthly meeting Thursday night.

Mayor Kany expressed himself as favorable to municipal ownership of a power and light plant. He said that the Dayton Power and Light Co., whose franchise with the city expires in December, has never submitted to the city a proposal for lower rates, and that the matter of negotiations has rested since representatives of that utility appeared before commission and asked for a renewal of its contract.

Other expressions in favor of municipal ownership, and opposed to such a plan, were given.

Opposition to municipal ownership was expressed by several who contended that the city should own its poles and wires in order that the contract for furnishing light and power might be opened to competitive bidding.

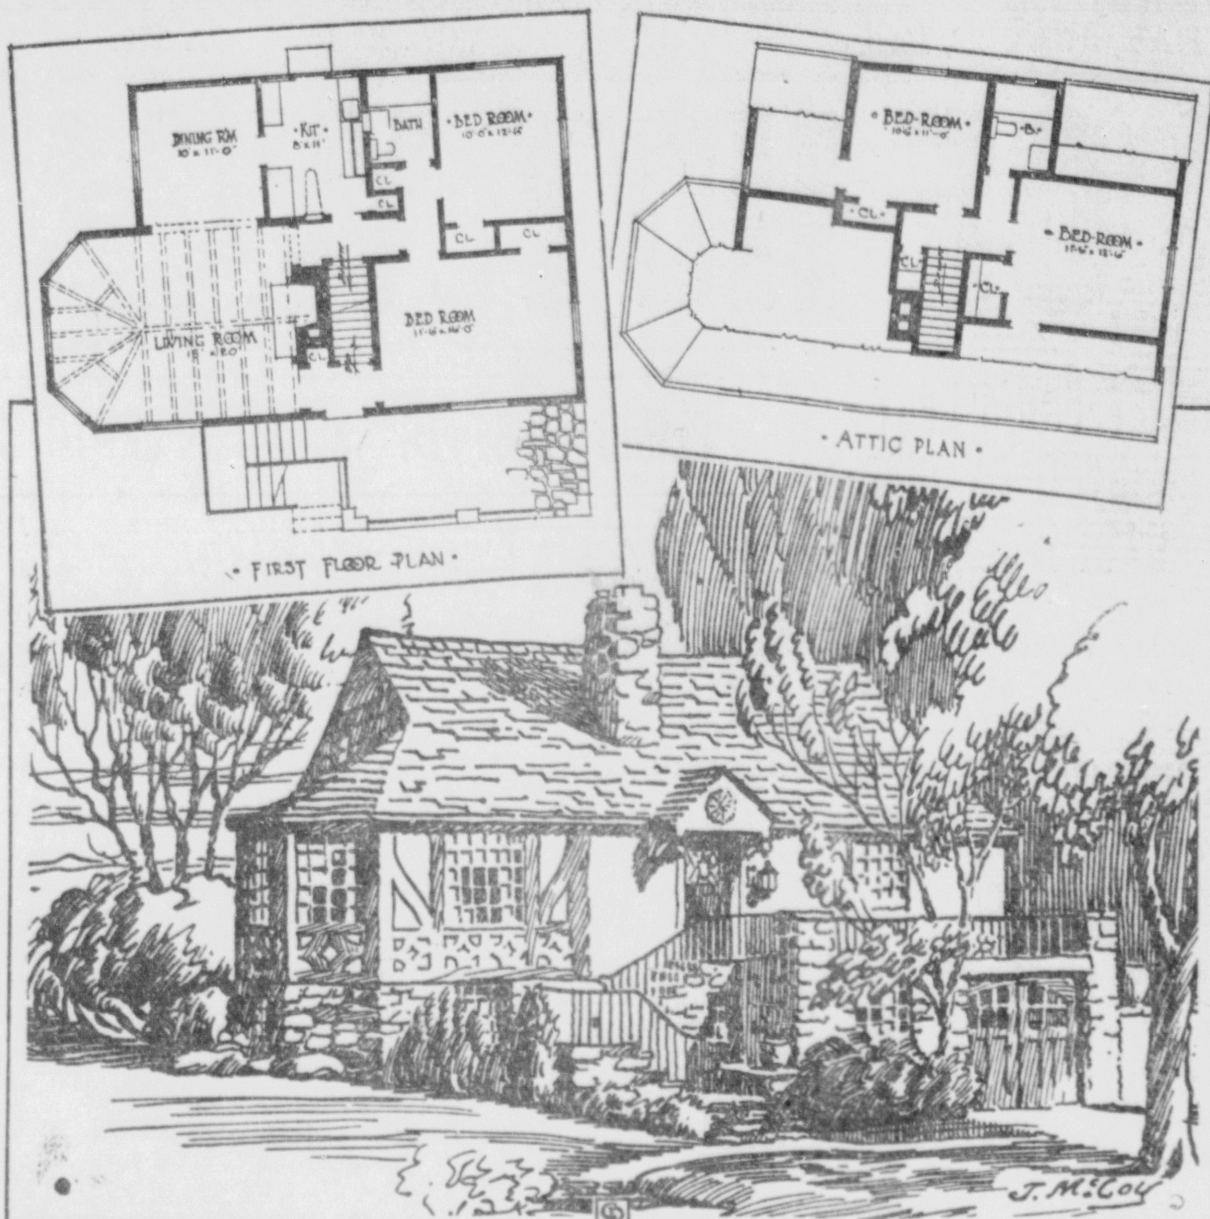

P. H. Flynn and L. D. Wilson, both of whom expressed themselves against municipal ownership, E. H. Heathman, local manager for the Dayton Power and Light Co., and George D. Geyer were others who spoke briefly.

C. W. Adair read a clipping which pointed out advantages of municipal ownership.

AUTOIST FINED

Lon R. Allen, of Alpha, was fined $100 and costs and sentenced to thirty days in jail by Judge S. C. Wright Monday for driving an automobile while intoxicated. Allen, who was arrested by County Road Patrolman L. A. Davis, entered a not guilty plea to the charge and was convicted after a hearing.

THIS HOUSE ORIGINAL AND EFFICIENTLY PLANNED

Small, medium priced house in original design but efficiently planned

Prepared for Central Press

By Architectural Research Bureau

The American Home Magazine

The difficulty of getting original designs in modern houses must be apparent to anyone who drives about our country-side. So many thousands of our small houses look exactly alike. At the same time, where attempts at originality have been made, the results are often more to be deplored than the little square boxes that make no attempt at being different.

A house which is distinctly unusual, yet adheres to the canons of good taste, is the one shown above. It is a really small house, and could probably be built in most parts of the United States for under $10,000. However, the plan is efficiently worked out, and the exterior shows a skilful use of materials.

The high foundation wall, which allows space for a garage underneath the house, as well as for game rooms and fuel rooms, is of stone. Above that, the wall is of stucco, with half-timbering around the living room bay. A roof of heavy variegated slates lend a final touch of beauty.

The living room was designed to have a beamed ceiling, which shows in dotted lines on the plan. The bay formed at the end of this room insures plenty of light and fresh air. The dining-room is really part of this room and increases the feeling of space in this small house. Besides the kitchen, the first floor also has two bedrooms, which are of good size and conveniently located as regards the bathroom.

Two more bedrooms are on the second floor, so that this attractive small house boasts four bedrooms and two baths. The upstairs bathroom is off a small hallway between the two bedrooms.

Funeral services for Miss Elma E. Liming, 27, who committed suicide Saturday afternoon by drinking a quantity of carbolic acid, were held at the Arthur Funeral Home in Wilmington, Monday afternoon with burial made at Port William.

Miss Liming committed the act at the home of her father, Madison Liming, near Port William at 3 p. m. and died about an hour later. She suffered a nervous breakdown two months ago and relatives attribute this as the cause of the act.

Her father and a brother, Ralph Liming, Port William are the only surviving relatives.

HOME CARE OF SICK WILL BE EXTENSION PROJECT THIS YEAR

The extension project to be offered the women of Greene County this fall is "Home Care of the Sick" and Miss Wanda Przyluska, accented as time went on, especially if he had difficulty in stalking a deer or some other animal to satisfy his growing hunger.

Eventually he did discover that meat stored in cool, dark caverns was preserved longer than when left out in the sun. He was the discoverer of refrigeration. Thousands of years later, this first principle had advanced only to the point where some of the famous emperors and conquerors had snow and ice brought from the mountains and stored in caves and deep trenches for the preservation of their perishable foods.

In the last few years engineers and scientists have concentrated on the development of practical domestic electric refrigerators. Thousands were sold and gave a certain degree of satisfaction, but required a considerable amount of attention. The public demanded more reliable refrigeration as it realized the necessity of having it in their homes.

Necessity is the mother of invention and the research laboratories of the foremost electrical organizations succeeded in producing a fool proof, hermetically sealed refrigerating unit. This unit does not require oiling or any other attention. How our prehistoric ancestors would have appreciated such a machine. Their marketing with clubs, spears and arrows would have been greatly simplified and made a twice-a-week adventure, instead of a daily task.

Appreciation of values is largely dependent upon comparison. The health specialist of Ohio State University is in charge. "We take fire insurance" Miss Przyluska says, "not because we expect fire, but because in case of fire we want some protection. We might wish to learn something about care of the sick, not because we have sickness but because in case of sickness we would know what to do and how to handle the situation."

Answers to questionnaires collected in several counties in Ohio show some interesting reports. In Pickaway County in sixty-four families, 274 school children lost 1,161 days of school in a year because of sickness. Among 530 adults, 990 days of work were lost for the same reason. Doctors bills in those families amounted to $3,770.75 and nurses bills to $271.00.

In Geauga County, 141 families spent $4,337.75 on doctor bills and drugs, not counting the lost time which is worth money. In Medina County, 104 families spent $4,017 on doctors and drugs, and 1,282 days were lost by adults and children because of sickness.

"Do you know how much sickness costs you in this county? How much time is lost because of it?" Miss Przyluska asks.

Tentative dates show that this project will be offered to Greene County women beginning in September. Instructions for giving the patient the maximum comfort with minimum effort and much more will be given in these lessons.

CAVEMAN WOULD HAVE LIKED ELECTRIC REFRIGERATION

The caveman, whose very existence depended on his ability to obtain food when he was hungry, would have appreciated electric refrigeration. Naturally, there must have been much food wasted as far as he was concerned. Being unable to store the remainder of a kill after he had eaten his fill, he would have to leave it to the ravages of decomposition or to the wolves.

When hunger next assailed him, he doubtless thought longingly of the choice piece of meat he was forced to abandon having no means by which it could be preserved safely. This thought was probably accentuated as time went on, especially if he had difficulty in stalking a deer or some other animal to satisfy his growing hunger.

Eventually he did discover that meat stored in cool, dark caverns was preserved longer than when left out in the sun. He was the discoverer of refrigeration. Thousands of years later, this first principle had advanced only to the point where some of the famous emperors and conquerors had snow and ice brought from the mountains and stored in caves and deep trenches for the preservation of their perishable foods.

Jenks - Nickell Nuptials Guests Enjoy Golf, Bridge And Luncheon At Club

BEFORE a small assemblage of near relatives and friends, Miss Leontine Jenks, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Jenks, was united in marriage to Mr. Dorsey Nickell, at the home of the bride's parents in Jamestown Tuesday morning at 7:45 o'clock. The single ring service was performed by the Rev. C. L. Buehler, pastor of the Jamestown Methodist Church in the living room of the Jenks home.

DELEGATES SELECTED AT AUXILIARY MEETING

Mrs. Clarence Horen and Mrs. Paul Fuller were selected as delegates from Joseph F. Foody Post Auxiliary and Mrs. Edward Paul and Mrs. Guy Toca alternates, to the state convention of the American Legion Auxiliary convention in Cincinnati, August 17 and 18. The delegates were chosen at the regular meeting of the auxiliary in Post Hall at the Court House Monday evening.

ARRANGE BIRTHDAY SURPRISE SUNDAY

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Weller, near Xenia, entertained a group of friends at their home Sunday evening. The affair was arranged as a surprise to Mrs. Weller, the occasion being her birthday. Music was enjoyed during the evening after which refreshments were served.

SOCIETY PLANS PICNIC

Members of the Missionary Society of the First Presbyterian Church will hold their annual picnic at the home of Mrs. J. R. McCormick, N. King St., Friday afternoon at 5:15 o'clock. Each woman is asked to bring a covered dish, the committee in charge furnishing chicken sandwiches, coffee and the table service. Following the supper Mrs. Winwood, Springfield and Miss Mae Orr, will give reports on the Wooster convocation. Mrs. George Weiss, Mrs. Walker South and Mrs. McCormick form the committee in charge of picnic arrangements.

KONJOLA ENDS TWO YEARS OF 'MAN'S MISERY'

Another Reason Why Konjola Is A Household Word In Tens Of Thousands Of American Homes

Konjola, among its thirty-two ingredients the juices of twenty-two medicinal roots and herbs, attacks at the very source the causes of the ill this modern medicine is designed to relieve. Profit by experience like that of Mr. Joseph Gent, 1645 Oak street, Youngstown, O., who says:

MR. J. JOSEPH GENT

"Two dollars' worth of Konjola ended two years of misery with stomach trouble. This may be hard to believe but it is true. Pains after meals were often so severe that I was doubled up in agony. I lost much time from work, and my rest was badly broken at night. Severe pains over the kidneys added to my misery. In a little over two weeks of Konjola treatment, all my health problems were solved. Gladly I endorse this splendid medicine."

Though Konjola does go swiftly to work, it is recommended that, for best results, a complete treatment of from six to eight bottles be used.

Konjola is a new and different medicine of thirty-two ingredients, twenty-two of them the juices of roots and herbs long known for their medicinal value. Konjola works quickly and thoroughly at the very root, the fount of the ill of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, and of rheumatism, neuritis and nervousness. Konjola is not designed to give mere temporary relief, but to bring new, glorious and lasting health.

There were no attendants. Large bouquets of summer flowers were used about the Jenks home.

Immediately following the marriage a three-course wedding breakfast was served the guests. There were covers for twelve at the bride's table which was decorated in a color scheme of pink and white. Those seated with Mr. and Mrs. Nickell were: Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Jenks, Messrs. Max and John Jenks, Mrs. Logan Nickell, Mrs. Clint Watts, Muncie, Ind., the bridegroom's sister; Mrs. Alma Laird and son Bobby, Kansas City, Mo.; Mrs. Warren Robinson and the Rev. Mr. Buehler.

Later in the morning Mr. and Mrs. Nickell left by motor for a trip to New York and Atlantic City. Upon their return they will reside with Mrs. Nickell's parents for the present.

Mrs. Nickell has been employed at the Antioch Press, Yellow Springs, as a linotype operator. She is also an accomplished musician having studied at the College of Music in Cincinnati. Mr. Nickell is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Logan Nickell, near Waynesville, and is employed at the Springfield Dairy Products Co., this city.

Mrs. P. A. Alexander, N. King St., is spending some time in Morrow, O., with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Whitteker.

Mrs. O. E. Bradford and daughter, Miss Helen Bradford, Mrs. J. W. Ballantyne, Miss Eleanor Col. lins, Xenia, and Mr. Dwight Gray, Columbus, were guests Saturday evening at a picnic supper at the home of the Rev. and Mrs. L. L. Gray at their home in Jamestown.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Matthews and son, Warren; Mr. and Mrs. Homer Pratt and daughter, Laura Louise; Mr. and Mrs. James Laurens and children, Mary Wilma and Donald; Mr. and Mrs. Lee Ferguson and son, Paul; Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Wead and sons, Wallace and Wayne; Mr. and Mrs. Marion Smith and daughter, Leona and Miss Ruth Sparrow, all south of Xenia, spent the week end at Russell's Point, O.

Gladly Community Club will hold its regular meeting at its hall Thursday evening, July 24. A good program has been arranged and all those attending are asked to bring a dime.

Mrs. Floyd Cummins and infant son, Tommy, who spent the past week here with relatives, returned to their home in Dayton Monday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Harrison, Cleveland, are spending several days with Mr. Harrison's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Harrison, Sr., at their summer cottage near Old Town.

Mrs. Harry Jay and children, Evelyn and Charles, S. Detroit St., and Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Yeakley and son, Billy, Chestnut St., were the week end guests of their uncles and aunts Mr. and Mrs. Earl Harshman and Mr. and Mrs. John Moots, Dayton, at their summer cottage, near Waynesville.

Mr. and Mrs. George Amole and son, Robert, Mr. Ward Amole, Mr. G. W. Smith and Mr. Edman Moore, Lower Bellbrook Pike, left Monday morning on a two weeks' motor trip to Virginia. They expect to visit friends and relatives in Lexington, Lynchburg and Newport News, Va.

The Rev. E. R. Jamieson delivered a lecture on missionary work in Egypt at the regular morning services of the United Presbyterian Church in Jamestown, Sunday morning.

Mrs. J. H. Ritchie, Akron, is spending this week in Jamestown as the guest of the Rev. and Mrs. L. L. Gray. The Rev. and Mrs. Gray and Mrs. Ritchie spent Monday at Serpent Mound.

Members of the Xenia Country Club wishing to make reservations for the dinner-dance to be held at the club Thursday evening, are asked to do so as soon as possible. Reservations will be accepted up until Wednesday noon by Mrs. Findley M. Torrence, chairman.

Mr. Lamar Bennett, N. Galloway St., left early Monday morning for Parkersburg, W. Va., where he will be employed as an inspector on the European corn borer quarantine liner, near that city.

CHILD DIES AFTER TEN WEEKS ILLNESS

James Ferguson, 10-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ferguson, died Tuesday morning at the Ferguson home, one-half mile north of Zimmerman, following an illness of ten weeks duration.

The death of the little boy is the second break in the Ferguson family, believed to be the largest in the county. Sixteen brothers and sisters, and the parents, survive the child. The little boy was a student in Sunnyside School, Beaver Creek Twp. His father is a member of the Beaver Creek Twp. board of education and a prominent farmer. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

SNEAK THIEF ROBS TWO XENIA HOMES

A thief who used an ice pick to open latched screen doors stole pocketbooks containing about $14 in two Xenia homes early Tuesday morning.

Miss Bessie Bechtell, who lives with her mother Mrs. Virginia Bechtell at 14 S. Galloway St., watched the thief open a screen door, rush in and grab a pocketbook containing $5 as she lay in bed about 4:30. The girl's cry failed to stop the thief who made his getaway.

Police believe the same man responsible for the theft of three purses containing about $9 at the home of Mrs. Wesley Kennedy, W. Second St. Mrs. Kennedy told the police she heard a slight noise, which she did not investigate, about 2:30. The same method was used to open a screen door.

APPOINT TRUSTEE FOR WILBERFORCE

The Rev. Wilbur Allen Page, pastor of the Union Baptist Church, Cincinnati, has been appointed a trustee of Wilberforce University.

by Gov. Myers Y. Cooper succeeding Joseph L. Johnson of Columbus, it was announced Tuesday.

The appointment was for a five year term. The term of Mr. Johnson expired the last of June, according to President Gilbert H. Jones. He had served through two appointments.

Life Was a Misery

"Before I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was weak and run-down, could not sleep and had troubles which come at my age (forty-three). Life was a misery. Nothing did me any good until I tried the Vegetable Compound. I am on my third bottle and I cannot recommend it too highly. I feel like a new person and I really think I would have been dead if I had not taken it. I think every lady ought to take it at the Change."—Mrs. Eunice M. ## WHAT PEOPLE TALK ABOUT

One of the older men remarks that when he was a boy, he used to spend a good deal of time listening to the conversation of workmen as they sat around at the noon hour while eating their luncheons. Over the cold dinner pail of those days much conversation flowed. He was impressed by the amount of interest those men took in politics and government. They talked often of what congress or the legislature was doing. Such conversation indicated a rather high level of intelligence.

Today, in so far as he overhears conversation, he doubts if the men are talking as much about politics and government. He argues that this indicates a fall in popular intelligence. He has the idea that they talk more about sports and pleasures, their girl friends, the things they like to eat, etc.

One consideration however, is overlooked by this gentleman, and that is as to what the women talk about. The granting of the suffrage to that sex, the work of women's clubs and societies, have broadened their interests. It could be expected that the average group of women 20 years ago would be talking perhaps more about the fashions than anything else.

As one overhears the conversation of women today, questions of government and politics, and particularly questions relating to public affairs in their home towns, are very much talked about. If the men are more concerned about trivialities, the women are less so.

Public intelligence must be rising, for you can see it in the newspapers, which reflect the demand of the people to know more about things of real importance. Even sensational newspapers print a great deal of stuff other than the scandals and tragedies and crimes they are accused of dwelling upon. Every year there is more interest in questions as to how we can make better communities and a better world.

IN BLOCK HOUSES

How would you like to live in a block house? No, not the sort our forebears used to put up in order to save their scalps from unfriendly Indians, but a block house of the sort Tommy makes on the floor, only ever so much larger.

Maybe if you are lucky, you will some day. Anyhow Ernest P. Goodrich of New York, a consulting engineer, and president of the Research Institute for Economical Housing thinks so. He visualizes a building with walls made of thin, insulated metal, steel frames with rock slabs, and factory built structural units, such as bathrooms, stairways, kitchens and porches.

"Imagine a house that can be erected in three days' time from whole rooms taken out of stock, just as a child builds a house of blocks," he says.

Yes, imagine it. Imagine, too, a house that can be put up and taken down in a few hours and moved away to another location over night, and as Mr. Goodrich suggests can be "repossessed" as pianos, radios and other things may be, when payments are not forthcoming, and then can be "reconditioned" and resold.

Ho, hum! Sounds like a fairy tale, doesn't it, especially to the person who is trying to build a home after the present day style and is wrestling with the labor market and with contractors. Yes, it sounds too good to be real.

The Los Angeles Times says that people are not worse than they used to be, but are simply a little bolder about it. We doubt whether they are even bolder.

Bad tidings for New Jersey fishermen is contained in the news that trout and bass in the state fish hatcheries are being fed on porterhouse steak and butter milk. Mere anglers will be too pibetian for these fastidious feeders.

Sometimes we wish some doctor would rise up and say that lettuce and spinach and such like things are unhealthy. They might taste ever so much better if he did.

The WAY of the WORLD

TIME TO GO BACK?

It is surely the age of organization. The civilized world is full of clubs, societies, and associations for doing everything that can possibly be done or undoing everything that somebody thinks ought not to have been done. One could easily spend his whole income, even if it were large, on the dues and demands of organizations. Perhaps it is time we unscrewed civilization a little and went back to simpler days and more individualism. Organizations with the most high-sounding titles are not always the most important. Frequently they are not important at all. A feeling of greater personal responsibility and less dependence on organizations would build a finer kind of civilization.

VICTORIES

We do not hear enough of the battles of peace, the victories that do not deal with war. Yet these non-military victories save more lives than were ever freed by the sword. Thirty years ago the death rate from typhoid fever was 34 per 100,000. Today it is less than five per 100,000 of the population. Thirty years ago the death rate from tuberculosis was 200 per 100,000. Today it is less than 78, and the day will come when there will be practically no tuberculosis. Do you not remember when a man or woman with consumption was doomed? Today there is no doom.

Medical science has won these magnificent victories. The least we can do is to co-operate in the cause of health. Join the doctors in putting the emphasis not on cure but on prevention.

WRITING

A man comes into this office and says he feels within him the urge to write. He has ideas. He seeks a medium. It is a proper ambition. There are plenty of mediums. Scores of magazines looking for articles. Scores of magazine editors looking for new names, new material, fresh viewpoint. It is silly to say you have to be well known to "break into the magazines." Nobody is so eager to make a fresh discovery of talent as an editor.

FACT FINDERS NEEDED

So-called economic experts used to tell us we couldn't make too many motor cars, but we did. Experts tell us we never can do this or never can do that, but we do. Tariff experts apparently think we can get along without European markets, but we can't. One more thing this country needs is some fact-finders to take the place of experts.

THE QUESTION BOX

CENTRAL PRESS

Answers to questions of information and fact can be obtained by writing to Central Press Bureau, P. O. Box 126, Washington D. C., and enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope. No answers will be given to marital, medical or legal questions.

What must an American-born woman who married an alien prior to Sept. 22, 1922, do to regain her citizenship?

She must petition in the United States district court for naturalization as an alien, but the granting of the citizenship is a formality that will be concluded 90 days after filing the petition, provided her husband is a citizen or eligible to citizenship.

Killing Ants

What can be used to rid a lawn of ants?

The department of agriculture recommends the use of carbon bisulphide, which can be obtained in any drug store. From one to three ounces of the fluid should be squirted into each ant nest, after which the ground should be stomped over the entrance to the nest. The fumes, which are harmless to man, will penetrate the nest and kill the ants. Wet blankets or burlap placed over the infested area will help keep the fumes in. Care must be used in handling carbon bisulphide, which is inflammable.

Anti-Cigarette Laws

What states have laws prohibiting the sale of cigarettes? None. Utah and Kansas, which formerly enforced anti-cigarette laws, have recently repealed their prohibitory statutes.

On With the Dance

From what work is the expression "On with the dance! Let joy be unconfined!" taken? Byron's "Child Harold's Pilgrimage"—canto iii, stanza 22.

Indian Tribes

How many Indian tribes are there in the United States? Including tribes of which only two or three members survive, there are 250 or more. The bureau of Indian affairs is at present engaged in compiling an accurate list of the tribes.

Railroad Investments

Is the Pennsylvania railroad rated as having more capital than the New York Central? No. The New York Central has the higher capitalization by several millions of dollars.

100 Per Cent Americanism

What is the definition of a "100 per cent American"? The term is loosely used, but usually refers to an individual who is so intensely patriotic that he is incapable of admitting that either the nation or its leaders ever err, particularly in matters involving foreign relations.

Bo-Broadway

By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE

NEW YORK.—Let's all arise and give three cheers for Supreme Court Justice Mack.

On one of those scorching days last week, when the heat would make your bloomin' eyebrows crawl, he turned to the jury and said:

"Gentlemen, you may take off your coats, roll up your sleeves and smoke, if you so desire. This case will probably last some weeks and it's no doubt inconvenient for you to be here in July when ordinarily you might be on holiday. I want to make things as comfortable as possible for you."

Justice Mack didn't jeopardize a scintilla of the court's dignity by that gesture. If anything, he added to it. The integrity of any institution is always safe in the hands of a man who is sure of his own worth. The trouble with too many occupants of the bench is, they demand respect instead of commanding it.

OPTIMISTS

"Tea rooms," according to a newspaper headline, "seldom pay their optimistic owners."

I've never yet encountered an "optimistic tea room owner." Usually they're a gloomy tribe—dignified and morose and unbending. The artistic austerity of their shops is terribly depressing. The lone candle in the casement sheds a melancholy beam and the single tea rose in the brass vase beside the cash register may minimize the commercial discord of the Scotch Piano; but it certainly doesn't infuse the place with cheer. I was talking it over with Longacre Lil the other night and she set me straight.

"Them tea room dames is optimists, all right," she said. "They been taught that it ain't cultured to smile an' appear happy. You'd be surprised at th' number o' boobs who keep sittin' on their emotions in order to keep on th' right side o' Emily Post!"

THE ROGUE SONG

UNCLE SAM HAS HIS EAGLE EYE ON TURKO-PERSIAN WAR MENACE THOUGH HE ISN'T WORRIED YET

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—The plateau of Ararat is not exactly within Uncle Sam's sphere of influence.

A war, starting there between Turkey and Persia, would seem to be in about the last place on earth, and between the last two countries, to be of any serious concern to Uncle Samuel. And, in fact, it could not concern him directly.

Still, if Turkey appeared to be on the point of gobbling Persia, the prospect might be regarded in Moscow and London as concerning Russia and the British most decidedly. Anything that deeply concerns Russia and Britain, especially in such a way as to create a conflict in interests between them, more or less concerns the whole world, at least indirectly.

THE RETURN FRICION between President Mustapha Kemal's Turkish government at Angora and Shah Mirza Reza's Persian government at Teheran has not been very prominently displayed in the newspapers, being generally considered so small an affair, for one thing, and in so remote a spot on earth, for another.

Probably it also looks important to the Persians, although their capital is so far removed from centers of modern civilization that they have not been much heard from. Anyway, ultimatums have been flying back and forth.

THE TURKS are the aggrieved people, from all accounts.

The Ararat uplands, it appears, are the dwelling place of a formidable number of thousands of Kurdish tribesmen, whom President Kemal accuses of making periodic descents on the plains on this side of the slope, looting Turkish villages and murdering Turkish villagers, and then retreating across the mountains into Persian territory, where Kemal says the Persian authorities not only protect them, but arm them for fresh raids, because they make an excellent thing out of disposing of their plunder.

Indeed, Kemal refers to the forays as "Persian invasions" and warns the shah that he is going to invade Persia in turn, unless the latter puts a stop to them.

IT SO HAPPENS that Kemal is reckoned to be just the kind of a Turk to make good whatever he threatens.

How the shah has answered is not very clear, for the correspondence in this Arabian Nights corner of the world apparently has been carried on in a rather informal fashion, but the Persian ruler is not a particularly mild man himself.

lowed the Rothstein shooting, has affixed his name to the title page of a new book dealing with his forty years' knowledge of Tammany Town's underworld. According to the blurb of the publishers—Doubleday Doran—"the inside of the Dot King case and the Elwell case, as far as the police know the inside, is told with an air of finality."

I happened to dabble, professionally, in both those cases, and Brother Carey's "inside" stuff handed me a big laugh.

There's an old saying in the newspaper business that "the best stories are never written."

And I imagine that's true of the Police Department as well.

self, according to stories circulated concerning him at the time he seized the reins of power from the Kajar dynasty four or five years ago.

Reza Kahn, as he was known then, had been a Cossack officer, with a tremendous reputation as a fighter—a wholly different type from the weak-kneed line of rulers who had preceded him.

OF COURSE it is true that Kemal is a much more up-to-date individual than Reza, with a good many ideas of modern warfare and some equipment for realizing them.

For instance, the Turkish troops in the Ararat region are described as being provided with several airplanes, out, on the other hand, the Kurds or Persians, or whomsoever the forces may be who are opposing Kemal's punitive expedition, are mentioned as having shot a few of the Turks' planes out of the sky, so that the score is not altogether one-sided.

In short, the bulk of the fighting (if much of it develops) probably will be as primitive, military men say, as anything the world has seen since the invention of gunpowder—sandlot stuff in its proportions, but as picturesque as Harun-al-Rashid.

THIS, HOWEVER, is assuming that President Kemal and Shah Mirza Reza are left to settle their differences between themselves, uninterfered with.

It may not turn out that way.

In the long run, it generally is taken for granted that the Turks, given a free hand, must beat the Persians completely and assimilate Persia, as a good deal their own kind of a country, though its Mohammedanism is of a thoroughly different brand from Turkey's.

BUT WOULD MOSCOW permit such an outcome?

Russia adjoins Turkey as a neighbor of Persia's. In the event of an emphatic shake-up, students of the middle east surmise that the soviet government would decide the time had come for it to include the territory southward from the Trans-Caucasian region to the Persian gulf under its own communistic banner.

A Russian move in that direction would be stepping on Britain's toes with a vengeance. John Bull's trading rights, some of his mandates, his Persian oil, his road to India—all would be endangered.

To say that the state department is worried by the Turko-Persian war menace would be expressing it entirely too strongly. Nevertheless, the division of near eastern affairs is keeping an eye on the situation. In this day and generation one hardly can pick out a spot on the globe that is not worth watching when trouble begins to sizzle. Besides, the threat of strife at the foot of the mountain on which Noah's Ark landed is humanly interesting.

Hot Hamburger Roast,
Brown Gravy
Potatoes au Gratin
Buttered Carrots en Casserole
Asparagus Salad
Cold Rice Custard with Cream

Milk puddings are ideal summer desserts, good for "young and old." You might save one of the carrots raw from the casserole to grate over the asparagus salad, to give it color.

Today's Recipes

Hamburger Roast—Two pounds hamburger, one egg, one-half onion, one green pepper, one-fourth cup evaporated milk, one-fourth cup water, one cup bread crumbs, two tablespoons chopped parsley, two teaspoons salt, a little pepper. Chop the meat fine, mix it thoroughly with the unbeaten egg, bread crumbs, seasoning and diluted milk. Form into a flat loaf or press into a bread pan. Lay strips of bacon over the top. Place in a hot oven (450 degrees). Sear well and reduce the temperature to 375 degrees, or a moderate oven and bake 45 minutes to 50 minutes. If pressed into a bread pan, one-half cup of tomatoes may be poured over the meat, or if desired, tomatoes may be used for basting the roast. Serve with potatoes au gratin.

Salt Water Best Mouth Wash

By LULU HUNT PETERS, M. D.

"My gums bleed a great deal when I wash my teeth, and two teeth are loose. Are these signs of pyorrhea? What can I do for it? My dentist said to do nothing but wash my teeth four or five times a day and use a mouth wash which he recommended. I have used it, but my condition is just the same."

"MRS. A."

you may have scurvy or pyorrhea or both, Mrs. A. The gums and the teeth are affected by the diet, and perhaps you are on a deficient diet. Better send for our article on Balanced Diet. (See column rules).

Scurvy is a disease, one of the characteristics of which is a hemorrhage of the mucous membranes of the skin, and it is due to a diet deficient in vitamin C, which is high in fresh vegetables and fruits, especially tomatoes and the citrus fruits.

Of course, in pyorrhea there is an infection as well, causing pus. But with the right diet and the proper daily cleaning of the teeth, and a dental cleaning every six months or so (some need it oftener), you should not develop pyorrhea.

The best mouth wash is very inexpensive! It consists of one level teaspoonful of salt to the full glassful of water. Wash the teeth first with any preparation that is best liked; it doesn't make any difference; bland soap is probably as good as anything; then with the salt solution, rinse the mouth thoroughly, gargle three times, then hold a small mouthful for five minutes; expel this and gargle again three times.

The proportion of salt is important because, according to Dr. Louise Bell's theory, the germs die in this, where they wouldn't if the normal salt solution were used, which is a level teaspoonful to a pint of water, not eight ounces.

You should massage your gums,

also, with your finger tips, every day. And go to a dentist who specializes in treating pyorrhea.

Mrs. G.—We know that there are but few diseases that are inherited in the true meaning of the word. Some diseases may be congenital; that is, children may be born with them, but these are contracted from diseased germ plasm, or in other ways before birth. For instance, a child in rare instances may be born with measles or scarlet fever. And if the parents are sufferers from syphilis they are pretty sure to be born with that disease.

We do know this, though, about the inheritance of disease: the tendency to certain disease seems to be inherited. For instance, the long, narrow thin chest is an inherited characteristic, and these chests are predisposed to lung disorders. Unstable nervous systems may be inherited, so that certain neurotic tendencies seem to run in families; particular types of intestinal tracts that are more susceptible to indigestion, etc., may be inherited also. But of these tendencies can be overcome by correct living.

Have Mate Examined by Doctor

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

Mrs. T. B.: Why don't you have your husband examined by a doctor to see what causes his mad rages? You could apply to the court for protection from physical violence from him and ask to have him examined.

One part of your letter, however, makes me feel that it is just possible that he may have some cause for jealousy, that part in which you speak of getting rid of him and marrying some other man, intimating that there are plenty of other men who would be available to fill his place in case you had him adjudged insane and sent to an asylum. There is no charge if a patient is sent to a state institution. Private sanitariums, of course, charge for the care of a patient. In most states insanity is ground for divorce.

TRUE BLUE: Thank you for your v. king words of appreciation, we Blue. Th were very encouragin to me.

Girls in L. Islam can marry without their father's consent as long as 21 ars, I understand, but I'm sure that is much too early for any girl to leave home and face the world, as you say. I am afraid I could not answer your question, and suggest that you consult a lawyer. In Alabama a girl must be 18 to marry with or without her parents' consent, and in Georgia the same.

YOUNGER SISTER OF ASTORIA: You are in a very trying situation, dear. It was mean of sister to take your boy friend away, but if a boy is so easily led, he really is not worth bothering about, is he? It is hard to feel right toward your sister under the circumstances, I am afraid, but make the effort, won't you, dear?

Exercising Important In Summer

By GLADYS GLAD

It is inadvisable for anyone to embark upon a course of reducing or of gaining weight during the summer months without giving the subject considerable thought. Most flesh of persons lose a great deal of weight during the hot weather without any effort on their part.

The reason is that they have not the desire for the huge meals that they consume in the cooler months. But it is likely that their thinner friends may find themselves also losing weight. Measures must be taken, of course, to prevent this from occurring.

The woman troubled with too much avoirdupois should not begin a rigorous course of reduction in the summer, if fasting tends to cause weak spells. The heat, with the normal reduction in the consumption of food, makes the season trying enough without deliberately adding to its discomforts. The fleshy woman should, first, lose of persons lose a great deal of weight during this season. But she should consume enough calories to retain her strength.

The thin woman should be increasing her calories at this time, if she wishes to retain her normal weight. However, she should not take cod liver oil, or make her intake of calories too high. The reason is that a high surplus is likely to cause stomach disorders, and the very thin woman usually hasn't a strong stomach. Skin eruptions so quickly follow stomach or intestinal disorders, that there remains but one thing for the slim woman to do if she intends to keep what flesh she has. That is to drink milk.

If the thin woman will drink a quart and a half of milk every day of the summer, she will not only retain her poundage, but will probably gain considerably. She must not, however, neglect her regular meals.

To keep the appetite normal during the hot weather is the thin woman's problem, and she should make a mighty effort to get enough exercise to stimulate her appetite. Such exercise should be taken only during the cooler part of the day.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

Standard Weight: Eloise: Your standard weight is 127 pounds. Use a bland soap on your skin. I would suggest that you lubricate your skin with pure olive oil nightly.

Gaining Weight: Hopeful and Trudy: Indeed you will find the course of gaining weight included in my booklet on "The New Figure" very effective in adding curves to your figure and in enhancing your health.

Height: Blue Eyes and Puzzled: The growth of the body is regulated by the Thyroid gland. There is no superficial means of decreasing a person's stature.

EDITOR'S NOTE: While it is impossible for Miss Glad to answer beauty questions by mail, she will be happy to send you her pamphlets on "The New Figure" and "Beauty Culture" if you will write her, care of this paper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope and 10 cents in coin for each to cover cost of printing and mailing. Please send questions on beauty will be answered through Miss Glad's daily column.

PINCH HITTING for Phil Frame BY R. A. H.

With the White House barbecue miniature golf course in operation more than a week, Emmett Tukey, caddy of the Xenia Country Club and winner of the championship in the caddy tournament there last summer, still holds the course record.

Tukey shot a 36 at the Henrie Bros. course shortly after it was opened up and his low score still stands.

Henry Eavey turned in the next lowest score, a 39 while Clement Henrie, one of the owners of the course and Walter "Speed" Leonard are tied fifth the next lowest score of 42. Bob Morton, former Xenia Central High athlete and Ohio Wesleyan football star, shot the course in a 44, which is par for the small links.

L. S. Barnes, Green St. business man, has the best score of older players, shooting the course in a 46, two strokes over par.

Mart Berry sits on a bench at the softball games at Cox Field but old timers among the fans can imagine that instead of seeing the players cavort in this new game, he is thinking about the old Xenia Nationals, the team that first made baseball history in Xenia and set a number of local idols on the pedestals of boydom.

Mart was the first manager for the Nationals. The team, a group of raw youngsters un-schooled in the finer points of the game, organized first under the sponsorship of the late John Witham, and had played for several Sundays when Mart Berry was called to take the reins.

He organized the team on a business basis, equipped the players with their first uniforms and the Nationals were started on their way to a local reputation. The team played first in what was known as Galloway's woods on the Cincinnati Pike and its earliest personnel included William "Dad" Kearney and Mike O'Connor, alternating as pitchers and outfielders; Mike Rachford, catcher; the late Tom "Peanut" Hayes on first base; Lester Stiles at second; Mike McNeelis, at shortstop and Harry Schweibold at third. Johnny Hayes, Dennis Langin, Archie Franks and others were also with the team and "Butch" Bentley became pitcher of the club later.

"Dad" Kearney quickly became a local idol. Small boys followed him proudly and when he was in the box the game was considered as good as in the bag. As an outfielder he was never known to miss a fly ball. Fans still recall the bluff Mike Rachford used to make to keep players on the bases from stealing. He had it down so well that few attempted and the bluff helped him cover up a none-too-good throwing arm.

When the team played in Galloway's woods, the fans made themselves comfortable by sitting on the grass under the shade of the trees. One tree in centerfield was the bane of the centerfielder's existence. Johnny Hayes used to stand under the tree trying to guess which way the ball would bounce from limb to limb.

The management used to "pass the hat" instead of charging at the gate, which was then against the law, and it was considered nothing to collect $60 or $70 at each game. After the team moved to what was later known as Reserve Park, a grandstand was built, bleachers installed and an admission charge was made at the gate.

Hundreds of fans, many of them women, used to attend the game, especially when the Nationals played the Wayneville team. There was bitter rivalry between the clubs and home games always drew a record attendance. Mart recalls once when the team played in Wayneville, a player who hit a long hit ran directly from first base to third through the pitcher's box and the umpire called him safe. Mart did a little calling himself that day. He called the team off the field.

Greene's Nebraska Indians used to furnish a feature game with the Nationals every year, usually on a week day and Mart recalls the best catch he ever saw made was a one-handed stab of a shot from an Indian bat in one of those games. It was made by Archie Franks, who was playing shortstop that day although he was also rated as a good pitcher.

Mart took his team to Millersburg once, to play against a team there, and the Nationals were defeated. "Dad" Kearney and Mike O'Connor both used in the box pitched their heads off but the Millersburg team included several professionals and they were too hot for the Xenia team. On the following Sunday the team played Akron and Mart recruited for the game by signing up the best of the Millersburg players and bringing back the old battery that had made fame at the O. S. and S. O. Home here, Thornton and Long.

Both had played with the Nationals before and Thornton turned in a great game that day, Akron winning 2 to 1. A shot along the foul line that the umpire called fair defeated the Nationals but Mart says to this day that it was foul.

When the Nationals finally broke up they were succeeded by the Reserves. That team later reorganized and moved from Cincinnati Ave. to Washington Park. This year the team changed its name to the Merchants. Its a long cry now back to the diamond in Galloway's woods but many of the older fans still think they saw the best baseball in their experience played there by the old Nationals when they were young Nationals.

SHOEMAKERS TAKE AMERICAN LOOP LEAD BY BEATING KI-RO

The Krippendorf-Dittman Co. softball team forged into the lead again in the American League race by defeating the Ki-Ro team at Cox Field Monday evening 14 to 7.

The teams were tied for league leadership when they went into Monday night's contest and inability to hit the offerings of Perrine, shoemaker pitcher, spelled difficulty for the luncheon clubs.

The losers started well by scoring one in the first while the shoemakers did not launch a concerted attack until the fourth. By this time they had solved the delivery of Russ Kimber and from then on hit him hard and often to accumu-

JAMESTOWN WINNER OVER BOWERSVILLE

The Jamestown Independents defeated the Bowersville Independents in a fast game between these bitter rivals played at Leach Park, Jamestown, Sunday afternoon.

Bowersville started well when M. Conklin, first man up, doubled and scored on A. Chitty's single. Evans tightened up after this and permitted only one run during the rest of the game, a singleton in the fourth contributed on an error and a hit.

Jamestown scored three times in the second, and got singletons in the third and fourth, adding two more in the seventh for good measure. Lucas pitched ably for Bowersville but his support failed him at crucial times.

IDLE HOUR DEFEATS CARROLL-BINDERS

The Idle Hour Club softball team defeated the Carroll-Binder Co. team of the National League 13 to 2 in a softball game played at the Mulberry St. park Monday night.

The Carroll-Binder team threatened to score several times but Bradshaw's masterful pitching kept the heavy hitters subdued. The Idle Hour Club will play the Criterion team of the National League Thursday evening the game starting at 6:30 o'clock.

HEAT CAUSES DEATH
PORTSMOUTH, C. July 22—A heart attack superinduced by the intense heat in this community today has caused the death of Samuel Luckett, 47, a city employee here.

late five runs in the fourth, four in the fifth and five more in the seventh, all the scoring being done in clusters.

The losers staged a belated rally in the seventh that netted three runs, and scored again in the eighth, but were unable to overtake the fast-going Krippendorf team. R. Anderson and Luttrell, each with three hits, led the attack for the winners although Wakley did the heavy hitting with a homer and a triple.

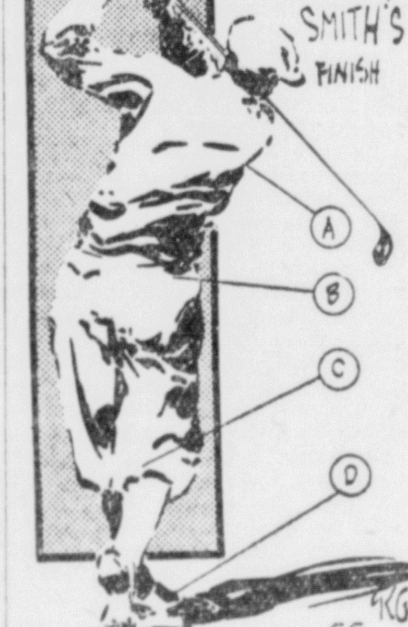

The Downtown Country Club meets the Carroll-Binders in a National League game at the yard Tuesday evening unless threatening rain should interfere while the Grahams will meet the Criterion Wednesday evening. The lineups:

FROM TEE TO GREEN

By ROY GROVE
Central Press Golf Writer

To study the finish of a golfer's swing is to study the backswing. They are identical with the exception of the foot movement.

If the above illustration were made in solid outline you would have a perfect picture of Horton Smith at the top of his backswing with the exception of the rise on the toe.

This finish of the weight, all on the left foot, is identical with the backswing, with the weight all on the right foot. The toe of the left foot, however, in the backswing is well set into the ground ready for the forward motion in coming into contact with the ball.

The importance of the following through the shot is not more evident than in the finish of Smith's tee shot.

The shoulder at (A) and the hips at (B) show where the power was put into the shot. At (C) we get the only relaxed position as Smith was ready to walk off the tee. At (D) the weight is all on the left foot. To put the weight on the right foot causes a slice.

Note also how the elbows and the hands are well extended upward and not pulled in close to the body, as if he had worked in getting the club through the ball.

To get this action means to hit in a circle. Do not come down on the ball in a choppy fashion. When you can get the club over your shoulder, as Smith is showing there you are hitting the ball for 250 yards with little effort.

Sport Ritticisms

By BILL RITT

The New York Yankees started out to win a pennant but now it looks like they might wind up with just an alibi.

Young Jack Thompson is welterweight champion of the world everywhere but in any ring which may hold Young Corbett No. 3.

Young Corbett has just beaten Thompson for the third time which must be pretty close to par for the course.

The Washington Senators have more comedians on their roster than any other ball club. But you can't make the Athletics believe that.

Mr. R. T. Jones says he has never been able to turn the intricacies of a typewriter. It's a tough course, Bobby, twenty-six strokes being par for the alphabet.

N. Y. STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, July 22.—Except for a few feeble rallies in the stocks which have been under the heaviest selling pressure, general conditions in the stock market this morning were unchanged from yesterday's final period. The bulk of the active industrial stocks opened lower, rallied a point or so on the average, and then sank back to their original price levels. Short covering by the professionals was responsible chiefly for the firmer tone in Radio Keith, Chrysler, American Can, U. S. Steel, Standard Oil of New Jersey and other favorites.

Continuance of the hot weather, indifferent industrial and business reports, the failure of the grain and cotton markets to rally and the discouraging second quarter statements issued by Atlantic Refining Company and Westinghouse were the principal obstacles to public buying of industrial stocks. This short-covering rally in the second hour brought American Can back to 124 3/4, up 1 1/2 from Monday's close; Consolidated Gas up 1 1/2 to 109 1/2; U. S. Steel to 163 3/4, up nearly a point; Vanadium to 35 1/4, up 2 1/4. On the whole, the market was dull but firm.

Wheat, corn and cotton dropped off to slightly lower levels and call money was unchanged at 2 per cent.

Nash value greater than ever

Recent developments stress the fact that Nash gives more for the money

Amid all new claims and counter-claims, one fact stands out as clear and as strong as sunlight. That is the unmistakably greater value which you get when you buy a Nash.

No other car at anywhere near the Nash price affords the pronounced advantages of Nash—including such features as twin ignition, with its greater power, speed, smoothness and saving of oil and gas.

Such a feature as twin ignition is highly important—but it is even more important as indicative of the superior engineering and of the in-built value which distinguish every Nash car.

You know Nash beauty. You may be familiar with Nash performance; Nash comfort and convenience; Nash thorough-going quality.

But until you compare what the Nash is and what it does with the remarkably low cost at which it may be purchased today—you cannot appreciate its wholly unexampled value. Come in and drive a Nash today.

DAD'S GIRL

EDNA ROBB WEBSTER

CHAPTER 56

She rather wished she had told him all about it before she accepted his ring, but at every attempt she had made, he had resolutely stopped her words. It made no difference to him—her past, he had insisted. All he asked for was her future.

But she wondered. Men were so erratic. One never knew how they would react to conditions. Now, Win, but she must not think of him, now. Only that she quite expected that Don would fall her in the same way—hoped that he wouldn't. She wondered, anyway, just what love was. The question of the ages. And of course, she couldn't answer it.

On the day of the first anniversary of her father's death, she sent a flowergram to New York, with instructions for the florist to decorate the graves of both her parents. In her heart were more love and reverence, than on that day, one year ago, of her father's obsequies. If he had watched from the vast beyond the progress, the anguish and suffering, and the triumphs of his daughter, he must have rejoiced and been proud. She had proved herself worthy to be a Forester—worthy of the traditions and wealth—which he had denied her.

In her mail that morning, was a letter from Don. It was gay, humorous, possessive. The days had dragged like centuries, since she left. He spoke of his work, of some improvements he was making. She had given him so much inspiration, had raised his value of life to the superlative degree.

He had ridden out at sunrise that morning, alone, with her in spirit. How could he wait six weeks to see her—and a year to marry her? Let him know if he might come sooner—tomorrow, if possible. His heart stopped when he thought that she might forget him. Was she happy? Could he make her happier? She must write at once. And he was always, her devoted—Don. The signature swam before her eyes. He was a dear—and she belonged to him.

There was also a letter from Gregory. He wrote occasionally to inquire for her welfare, and she appreciated his concern. She opened the letter eagerly. He was now her only connection with that world—it seemed so very far away now. Her brow puckered in a frown as she read the short message. It was an urgent summons to come at once to New York—an important matter required her immediate presence. Puzzled and concerned over what the important matter could be, as well as disliking to ask for several days' absence from the office, she showed the letter to Randall. She knew that the affair must be urgent, else Gregory would never have asked her to leave her work without further explanation. Of course, Randall could not silence her perplexities, but readily consented to her going. She packed a week end bag, and took the first east-bound limited.

Arrived in New York, she went directly to Gregory's office. He seemed surprised to see her so soon, but greeted her cordially and soon, he seated her in a chair, when he saw how tired and anxious she was.

"I hope my message did not disturb nor frighten you," he apologized with concern.

"But what is it, Mr. Gregory? Has something dreadful happened? Has Win—" she could not go on. All the fond memories of him rushed back to her with a force that nearly suffocated her. She thought she had almost forgotten. Gregory smiled paternally. "Nothing dreadful, Clara Dee. And it concerns only you. But I have important news for you."

She experienced a great sensation of relief at his words, felt that nothing he could now say would effect her much. He opened a drawer of his desk and drew out a large document.

"About a year ago," he resumed, "I read to you your late father's last will—at least, that part of it, which it was then my duty to read to you. Here, I have the rest of it, which he requested that I read to you one year later—providing I deemed you worthy of hearing it. He left the affair entirely to my judgment, which compliment I appreciate immensely, although it has proved to be an easier task than I had feared. He asked me to judge you as if you were my own daughter, in carrying out his wishes."

"At the time I was very much opposed to his plan, but I have come to understand his strange bequest, and to admit that his was a splendid idea. His instructions were, that if, a year after his death, I believed that you had succeeded in overcoming poverty and adverse circumstances, had been honorable and true to his ideals, and had proved your fitness for the Forester name and fortune, I should read to you this paper."

As he adjusted his glasses and rustled the thick, crackling parchment, Clara Dee leaned forward in her chair, with wide eyes and parted lips. Tears spilled over her eyelashes had trickled, unheeded down her white cheeks. Gregory cleared his throat and began to read slowly, with the same careful enunciation with which he had read the will to her a year ago.

"If, in the judgment of my esteemed and beloved friend, John Gregory, or his appointed successor in the event of his death, after one year from my death, my beloved and only daughter, Clara Dee Forester, has fulfilled my wishes and ambitions for her, she shall become sole heir to the following estates and holdings—" and there followed a long list, the value of which could only be hastily estimated at many millions.

Then—"If for any reason my daughter has proved herself unworthy in the mind of my friend, and please God, may she not, these same may be disposed of as follows: Gregory stopped and removed his spectacles, dabbed at his eyes with his handkerchief and concluded, "no need to read the rest, of course. If ever a girl fulfilled the prayers and hopes of a father, under the most difficult conditions anyone could conceive, you have, Clara Dee, in my opinion."

There was silence in the great room for several long moments, only a small clock on the desk ticked away impatiently.

When Clara Dee spoke, her voice sounded faint and unreal, even to herself. "I don't know how I can ever thank you, Mr. Gregory."

"For what?" he asked brusquely, to conceal his emotion.

"For adhering so closely to my father's wishes."

"What else could I have done?"

"You could easily have said that I did not deserve such a fortune, and I'll wager some of that would have been yours, if in your opinion, I hadn't earned it."

He neither admitted nor denied the truth of her statement, but became conspicuously occupied.

"Are you quite sure that I deserve this honor and—this wealth?"

she added wistfully.

"Without a trace of a doubt! I've watched you and hoped and prayed for you as if you were my own, not only because of the fortune you had at stake, but for your own sake. You were given a harsh trial and often nothing but my promise to your father kept me from helping you. You never told me all, but I suspected more than you know, at times, and I'll warrant that not every girl could come to the surface with her head up, as you have."

"I can only thank you again, Mr. Gregory."

"And now, would you like to go home? Under your father's orders, everything has been kept in readiness for your return. You see, I expected that you would return. I have even re-established many of your old servants, including your personal maid." He turned and spoke a brief order into the phone.

"But my work—"

He smiled. "You have no use for a stenographic position, now, Clara Dee."

"But I loved my work, I had just become independent enough to enjoy everything. It would hardly be fair to the company—"

"My dear, there are hundreds of competent girls who would appreciate the opportunity of taking your position; and if business interests you so much, do you not think that discharging and investing of millions requires an alert brain and considerable time?" he reminded her. "Of course, a vast fortune can be used with unscrupulous disregard, but that is not the way I should expect you to use it now. Your training will be invaluable to you in the future."

"You are right," she admitted thoughtfully. "What a pleasure it will be to carry on for Dad, if you will help and advise me, I shall build an everlasting monument to his memory. How he must have loved me, to have made these plans and to have had the courage to let me out, I see it all now, and understand why he did it. Oh, has only to watch the girls and boys of my set for a few days or nights, to understand his fears and plans. And I am afraid his fears were justified. Do you know, Mr. Gregory, I've always felt that he had some great purpose in his seemingly harsh treatment of me."

The attorney nodded kindly. "Now, aren't you tired enough to go home?"

"Yes, I am, please."

CLOUDS SHIELD SUN IN COUNTY; YELLOW SPRINGS GETS RAIN

ern Ohio, West Virginia, Virginia and into Maryland, the middle west also has suffered.

The percentage of rainfall to normal during the growing season from May 20 to the latest record, July 21, is given by Kincer as follows:

Southwestern Virginia, 23 per cent.

Western West Virginia, 19 per cent.

Eastern Kentucky, 22 to 30 per cent.

Southern Indiana, Illinois, 25 to 30 per cent.

Western Tennessee, 2 per cent.

Southern Arkansas and Northern Louisiana, 7 to 13 per cent.

Eastern Texas, 23 to 33 per cent.

Northern Mississippi, 10 to 17 per cent.

Southern Kansas, 30 per cent.

Southeastern Nebraska and Southwestern Iowa under 33 1-3 per cent.

Northern Indiana, Illinois, 50 to 75 per cent.

Ohio varied, 20 to 50 per cent.

Southern Michigan 50 to 75 per cent.

Minnesota, 66 2-3 per cent.

Eastern Iowa, 50 per cent to over normal.

North Dakota, 40 to 67 per cent.

Eastern Montana, 30 to 65 per cent.

South Dakota, under 50 per cent.

Records of forty years standing—the earliest weather bureau records of all stations within states are broken by the drought in Virginia, West Virginia, and Kentucky.

Maryland, Kincer found, experienced almost as dry weather in 1925 and 1926.

The severity of the heat is shown by the fact that maximum temperatures ranged from 98 to 101 from Thursday to Sunday in an area from Nebraska to the middle Atlantic Coast.

COLUMBUS, O., July 22—Ohio is experiencing one of the driest seasons in history and July has been one of the driest months since the United States weather bureau was established here, according to William H. Alexander, meteorologist of the station.

Rainfall for the season is three inches below normal, causing serious damage to farm crops throughout the state. Not a drop of rain has been reported from any section of Ohio during the

The Theater

Ernest Truex, now playing in "Lysistrata" at the forty-fourth St. Theater in New York, is a diplomat of the age who might be more successful in promoting friendly relations between the United States and Great Britain than any real career man.

Truex was born in Missouri and has been on the stage since he was 14. He is now rated as the best American actor who is exactly what he is in Piccadilly Circus and the English provinces as he is in Times Square and the American "sticks".

An instance in point is related in connection with his experience in London. After he had been passing English theater-goers for some time, he was asked by a group of them: "What's the matter with you? You look like a foreigner." He replied: "I'm not a foreigner, I'm an American." They then asked: "What's the matter with you? You look like a foreigner." He replied: "I'm not a foreigner, I'm an American." They then asked: "What's the matter with you? You look like a foreigner." He replied: "I'm not a foreigner, I'm an American."

ERNEST TRUEX

After it was all over neither would admit that it had "topped" the battle that they had waged seventeen years ago when the story was first produced, although they both admitted it was a first rate fight.

Farum has fully recovered from a long illness and is planning to re-enter pictures, playing a leading role in "Ten Nights in a Barroom." Santschi has also been signed for a part in the same film, which is to be made by an independent company.

Having been confined to her home for the last two months following a breakdown, Renee Adoree is now well on the road to recovery. Her physicians hope she will be able to return to work soon.

EIGHT INDICTMENTS RETURNED BY SPECIAL GRAND JURY HERE

Eight indictments were returned by the grand jury for the May term of court which held a recess session Monday for the purpose of clearing the docket of a number of minor criminal cases.

True bills were found against the following persons: Floyd Watson, grand larceny for alleged theft of household goods valued at $100 from Homer Leavell, last February 9; Robert E. Pack, removing mortgaged property from the county; Ellis Jones, Ralph Jones and Ralph Jackson, joint indictment for burglary and larceny for alleged theft of twenty-three fleeces of wool valued at $45 from a barn on the farm of R. D. Williamson, Greene County representative in the state legislature, May 7.

Otis Shearer and James R. Pierce, grand larceny, joint indictment for alleged theft of 320 pounds of copper wire from the Pennsylvania Railroad Co.; Albert D. Otto, grand larceny for alleged theft of 320 pounds of copper wire from the Pennsylvania Railroad Co.; Charles Martin and William Baber, separate indictments for grand larceny for theft of two automobile wheels and two tires, worth $35, property of the Xenia Iron and Metal Co.; George W. Rogers, highway robbery, for the alleged assault of Edward B. Scott and theft of $22.

A case of receiving stolen property against Mrs. Lulu Tatum was ignored. The grand jury examined ten witnesses covering nine cases.

DEATH CLAIMS MRS. SIMEON H. DEACON FROM LONG ILLNESS

Mrs. Mary Ann Smith Deacon, 78, wife of Simeon H. Deacon, died at her home, 672 S. Detroit St., Tuesday morning at 6:10 o'clock. Mrs. Deacon had been in failing health for several months but had been in a serious condition since February. Death was due to a complication of diseases.

Mrs. Deacon was born in Buckinghamshire, England, August 6, 1851. She came to the United States when she was fifteen years of age, first settling in Cincinnati and later coming to Xenia. She was the last of her immediate family. Her marriage to Mr. Deacon took place sixty-one years ago. She was a member of Christ Episcopal Church and Phoenix Rebekah Lodge.

She is survived by her husband and two daughters, Mrs. W. E. Swaby and Mrs. Charles Haas, both of Xenia. Funeral services will be held at the late home Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock with burial in Miami Cemetery at Corwin. Friends may call at the home Wednesday evening after 7 o'clock.

Troop No. 41, Boy Scouts of America, will hold its regular meeting Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock at the Scout Cabin. It is announced by Scoutmaster Carl Pramer.

Kenneth Swigart, Scout scribe, was winner in the contest conducted by the troop, with David Cherry, Jr., following in second place. This gives the winner a week of free camping at Camp Miami. Troop 41 has had the following Scouts at Camp Miami this year: Arthur Harner, Harold Miller, David Cherry, Richard Adair, Clinton Adair, Robert Pramer, John Hupman, Kenneth Thomas, William Anderson and Kenneth Swigart.

COUNTY SUES HEIRS TO RECOVER FUNDS

Heirs of L. I. Frazier, former Clinton County trustee, contract, who died in a mysterious dynamite cap explosion after his indictment on forgery charges, were sued for recovery of $11,150 by C. L. Swaim, prosecuting attorney of Clinton County, Monday.

The money sought to be recovered that was alleged to have been paid illegally to Frazier who was indicted on charges of having presented fraudulent bills and having received payment from the county for stone that was never delivered. The suit is one of twenty-five civil actions being instituted against persons and firms for recovery of money due Clinton County.
